Veronic Mazet is a questionable French adjective by Quail which means which or what. Like most adjectives, it has four forms: masculine singular (quail) and plural (quales), and feminine singular (quelle) and plural (quelles). The following examples show all four forms in action: Quail Jor Soames-Nous? (What day is it?) Quelle heure est-il? (What time is it?) Quels cours vas-to-prendre? (Which classes will you take?) Quelles sont tess couleurs préférées? (What are your favorite colors?) If both quel and qu'est-ce que are equivalent to what to do, how do you choose? It's not hard when you know what to look for. Quel is an adjective, and an adjective describes a noun, so that has big clues: look for nouns that quel could accompany. Here's an example in English: What dress in question will you wear tonight?, what is the noun associated with the dress. And what's the best restaurant around here?, what's tied to noun restaurants. So for those two questions, you use quel in French, like: Quelle Robe Vase - To Porter ce soir? (What dress will you wear tonight?) Quel est le meilleur restaurant par ici? (What's the best restaurant around here?) Now contrary to those sentences with a question what did you do last night? Noun is what's in this question, so you use qu'est-ce que in French. Qu'est-ce que tu as fat hier soir? (What did you do last night?) French uses quail in two specific ways. Quel A Noun Quel Quel Be directly in front of the noun, followed by a yes/noun. The following examples show you both versions: Quelle Robe Est-CE Q to Was Porter Ce Tyre? (What dress will you wear tonight?) Quelle Robe Vase - To Porter ce soir? (What dress will you wear tonight?) Format quel + noun + yes + yes / yes If the question includes a preview like what time, use one of the following phrases: Preview + Quail + Noun + Yes/ Noun + Noun + Yes/ Noun + Noun + Noun + Noun + Noun + Noun + Noun + Noun + Yes / Noun + Noun + Noun + Noun + Noun + Noun + Noun + Noun + Noun (What time will we start?) The other way to use a noun is different from the noun, the Quail Plus Atre Plus. In this sentence creation, an conjugated form of verb être (to be) always sits between the quail and the noun such as: Quels sont vos films préférés? (What are your favorite movies?) Quelle an été votre réaction? (What was your reaction?) To get there, here's how you proceed: The noun is asking about the question and determining what your gender and numbers seem to be in French. For example, what was your reaction? For, the reaction is feminine singular. Match the proper version of the quail for the noun. The woman of the quail is going to suppress the singular version. Now, you have taken action. Match the proper tension of the être to the version of the quail and the noun and insert it between two words. In this example, you need the last strain of the atre in the third person: an été. Insert it between pressing and retraction. Et voilà! When asking someone to make a choice between two or more things, you need questionable adjective quail, which means which or what. Equal Example... Quail film wakes-to-voir? Which movie do you want to watch? Quelle ville est plus Jolie: Annecy ou Besançon? Which city is beautiful: Annecy or Besançon? Features of questionable adjective French questionable adjective singular plural masculine qui queles feminine quelle All four words are equally pronounced in front of the consonant: s in plural forms is silent. Quail film préfères-tu? Which movie do you like? Quels livres est-ce qu'elle doit acheter? Quels livres doit-eli acheter? What books does he need to buy? Informally, you can put the quail and noun at the end of the question: Tu Prepheres Quail film? Which movie do you like? Elle doit acheter quels livres? What books does he need to buy? When asking a question with a verb that needs an offer, the preview precedes quel. Equal Example... À quel travel est-ce que to penses? À Quail Tour What trip are you thinking about?
