Google unveiled its new service late Sunday night: Google Apps for Your Domain, a collaborative set of Google tools for businesses and other organizations. Here's what it's all about: With Google Apps for Your Domain, you can offer our communication and collaboration tools for your entire organization—customizable with your branding, color scheme, and content through the administrative control panel and without hardware or software to install or maintain. Tools include Gmail, Google Talk, Google Calendar, and Google Page Creator, and you choose the combination that's appropriate for your business. At the moment you can sign up for the beta service, and the best is all for free - considering that everything you get is a pretty good deal. Are you planning to use Google Apps? Thoughts on comments or tips for lifehacker.com. Google Apps For Your Domain Ymgerman/123RFGoogle is looking for new ways to promote and show apps and games that deliver a world-class Android experience, and to that end, the company has taken the covers of Android Excellence, a new program that aims to showcase these great apps. The apps shown must meet a number of important criteria. Not only do you need to be generally good apps, but you also need to track Google's best practices, great design, technical performance under the hood, and good optimization for every device they're on. Every day, developers around the world work hard to create high-quality apps and games on Android, Google developer's marketing chief Kacey Fahey said in a blog post. In an effort to deliver amazing experiences to an ever-growing diverse user base, we've seen a significant increase in the level of polish and quality of apps and games on Google Play. Initially, there is a whole list of apps and games that cut the Android Excellence, including the likes of Evernote, HotelTonight, Runtastic and Riptide GO: Renegade. The full list can be found here. Not only that, but the list is updated quarterly – so you can check in every few months to see what Google considers to be the latest and best Android apps. The apps can be found in the revamped Editor's Choice section of the Google Play Store. It's nice to see How Google highlights apps that work well on Android. It's far too easy to search for an app just to download it and find that it's either badly designed or faulty and doesn't work well on your device. Hopefully, when you download from Google's Android Excellence List, this issue should be a thing of the past Even if you're not looking for a specific app, the new list should be a great way to discover something new. Google's recommendations have been developed as a new YouTube app for users with unreliable data connections. It is called YouTube Go and is to be published in India before a wider launch takes place. Google Google the app is considered offline first, sociable and related, giving users personalized recommendations, a simplified user interface, and connections with other users. Like normal YouTube, Go offers trending and popular videos on its homepage, but it also has the ability to preview videos before saving or watching them. Users can select the resolution to store or stream videos and get an estimate of the data to be consumed. Speaking of data: Videos can be shared with nearby users without using data, with videos sent and received exclusively through the YouTube Go app. In its announcement post, Google says connectivity shouldn't be an obstacle to watching YouTube. Johanna Wright, VP of YT Product Management and a team of engineers, designers and researchers, visited 15 cities in India to gather ideas and test prototypes with hundreds of people. So they built a brand new YouTube that is better suited to their individual needs. Although YouTube Go is launched step by step, interested users can sign in here to be notified when the app is ready. Google will spend the next few months collecting feedback and improving the app before it is released early next year. Source: YouTube Blog SUBSCRIBE TO OUR NEWSLETTER!
