Itsy Bitsy Spider or Incy Wincy Spider is a modern nursery rhyme that is very popular among children. The origin of this song is unknown. It was first published in 1920, more like an adult song in Camp and Camino in Lower California with the words blooming, bloody instead of itsy bitsy. The actual version of Itsy Bitsy Spider was later printed in 1947 by the California Folklore Society in the Western folklore collection. It appeared as a nursery rhyme in 1948 in American Folk Songs for Children a collection by Mike and Peggy Seeger and in 1955 in Maxwell's book Slutz Stewart The Growing Family: A Guide for Parents. Itsy Bitsy Spider Finger Play Itsy Bitsy Spider, more often recited than sung, is a game of children's finger game. She tells the adventures of a Spider, called Itsy Bitsy (or Incy Wincy - more popular in England), that happens up and down, and up again, as the weather is chaining. Children have to imitate his movements while singing the song, a very fun activity, useful to improve his manual dexterity. Rima has several supported versions after follows: Itsy Bitsy Spider Lyrics Itsy bitsy spider dragged up the mouth of the water drain. Down came the rain, and washed the spider. Out came the sun, and dried all the rain, and the bitsy itsy spider went up the drain againIn other versions, dragged is replaced by climbing or went Incy Wincy spider climbing up the drain. Down came the rain, and washed poor Incy out. The sun came up and all the rain dried up and the Incy Wincy spider climbed again. Nursery rhyme This article is about the nursery rhyme. Play media Itsy Bitsy Spider singing game Itsy Bitsy Spider (also known as Incy Wincy Spider in Australia[1] and UK,[2] and several other similar sounding names) is a popular nursery rhyme and fingerplay that describes the adventures of a spider as it climbs, descends, and refakes downspout or waterspout of a gutter system (or , alternatively, the drain of a kettle or outdoor tank). It is usually accompanied by a sequence of gestures that mimic the words of the song. Its Roud Folk Song Index number is 11586. Lyrics A commonly used version uses these words and gestures:[3] Words Fingerplay The bitsy spider has climbed on the water. Downstairs came the rain and washed the spider. The sun came out and all the rain dried up and the itsy bitsy spider climbed back down the drain. Alternately tap the thumb of one hand to the index finger of the other. Hold both hands up and wiggle your fingers as your hands are lowered. Sweep your hands from side to side. Raise both hands and sweep to the sides to form semicircle like the sun. Wiggle your fingers up. (As in the first line) There are other versions. Song Song Sources be found in publications, including an alternative version in the book, Camp and Camino in Lower California (1910),[4] where it was referred to as [classic] Spider Song. [5] It seems to be a different version of this song using blooming, bloody instead of itsy bitsy. It was later published in one of its modern versions of Western Folklore by the California Folklore Society (1948),[6] Mike and Peggy Seeger, American Folk Songs for Children (1948). [7] The lyrics described in 1910 as being from the classic Spider Song:[5] Oh, the flowering and bloody spider climbed on the spider web, the blooming, bloody rain descended and washed the spider, the flowering and bloody sun came out and dried up all the rain, and the flowering and bloody spider came back on the canvas. The song is sung by and for children in countless languages and cultures. It is similar to the songs of children's songs Auf der Mauer, auf der Lauer and Spannelanger Hansel in German-speaking countries. Records This article needs additional quotes for verification. [9] In popular cinema culture In Jordan Peele's film, the young girl, Adelaide Wilson, begins whistling Itsy Bitsy Spider when she is in the fun house in front of the mirror room. Her double, Red, starts whistling the same song just before she sees herself for the first time. All doppelgängers were underground waiting for their opportunity to go above ground, or up waterspout, Red is the one who drives them up waterspout. It is one of the main musical themes in the 2006 horror film Séance. It was mentioned in two Spider-Man films: in 2002, by Willem Dafoe as Green Goblin in Spider-Man and in 2014 by Jamie Foxx as Electro in The Amazing Spider-Man 2. Television Bart Simpson sang the rhyme in the tenth episode of season four of The Simpsons, Lisa's First Word. It was featured in the Dora Explorer children's program and in the South Park episode Something You Can Do With Your Finger. A child singing the rhyme twice can be heard in the opening of the episode Criminal Minds, Gatekeeper. In the Netflix adaptation of Lemony Snicket's A Series of Unfor Unfortunate Events, in the middle of Slippery Slope, Part 1, during the scene in which Baudelaires escapes the Snow Scouts, Lemony Snicket tells viewers to send the stage to the song, knowing they taught it as a child.
