As Maus I had read a year ago and Nadja Spiegelman's tempting memoirs in summer, I was more than ecstatic to find this second volume on the shelves of my local library. And as quite a while has passed, I was grateful that this volume had a quick summary at the beginning of what happened before: Art Spiegelman, a cartoonist born after World War II, is working on a book about what happened to his parents as Jews in Poland in wartime. He has made a number of visits to his childhood home in Rego Park, N.Y., to record his father's memories. Art's mother, Anja, committed suicide in 1968. Art is enraged when he learns that his meeting, Vladek, has burned Anja's memories in wartime. Vladek re-marries Mala, another survivor. She often complains about her rascality and lack of concern for her. Vladek, a diabetic who has suffered two heart attacks, is in poor health. In Poland, Vladek had been a short-time textile salesman. In 1937 he married Anja Zylberberg, the youngest daughter of a wealthy family of hosiery Sosnowiec. They had a son, Richieu, who died during the war. Forced first into ghettos, then to hide, Vladek and Anja tried to escape to Hungary with their prewar acquaintances, the Mandelbaums, whose nephew, Abraham, had attested in a letter that the escape was safe. They were captured and, in March 1944, they were taken to the gates of Auschwitz. Once again this graphic novel left me in a loss of words, so I think it's best if I'm going to share those scenes that evoked certain strong emotions in me: It was fascinating to see Francis depicted through her husband's eyes, rather than her daughter (as in I'm Supposed to Protect You from All This). But that also bothered me here: I didn't like the way it was portrayed. I kept feeling that Francis was getting into the wrong conversation. Like, this wasn't a conversation for her to participate. I mean, that comment didn't sit well with me. And this just... really?? So I was more than willing to let the focus change from today. Until I realized how heartbreaking the Vladek. The scenes in the camp were one of the most blunt. It's sad, but the previous three images gave me a ray of hope in this world full of cruel and inhuman suffering (i.e., before reading the last panel, but still). This graphic novel also me a lot, I didn't expect. I thought I'd heard it all - or at least most - of what you had to know about Auschwitz, but my history lessons weren't even close. The horrors that Vladek and Anja and many others had to go through were annoying. The amount of suffering... My heart hurts. My mouth's still open. THREE OR FOUR WEEKS. All in all: I arrived unprepared with Maus II. The amount of suffering, anguish and anguish left me emotionally worn out. (I'll definitely end up thinking about them for a while to come.) Needless to say, this is still one of the most moving and heartbreaking graphic novels I've read to date. 4.5/5 stars Note: I'm an Amazon affiliate.
