Please scroll down the page for the free PDF links. What is different about the two arrangements? An arrangement uses four chords (see below on the page), and the simple version above has only two chords. The melody is available in standard notation as well as in guitar tabs. It is true that the most satisfying arrangements of this Christmas song will have 3 or more chords (the I and V chords and maybe the V of V), not only 2 as I have it in this version. However, for a VERY new beginner to take care of 2 chords is enough! My newest students use the little C and small G7 (see my Big Guitar Chords page) in Jingle Bells, and the song sounds good. In addition, the guitar tabs melody has many open string notes, so this song is very easy for a beginner to choose once they understand how tablature works. Uh-oh... they have to change the strings! Well, I didn't say that the melody for a new flatpicker will be easy! If you change the strings, a beginner will probably have to deal with it first. What struggles will a student encounter with this melody? You have to find the right cord for the left hand... then the right waistband... then the right left finger... and last of all the right hand must pluck the right cord! All at the same time. No wonder novice guitarists often separate from what they intend to do and the sounds that actually come out of the guitar! That's why familiar songs are so useful for beginner guitarists... But at least there are many repeated notes, and the main note is an open string. And phew! --almost all children know this song, making it much easier to learn! The more imaginative version Okay, here is the more imaginative version with 4 chords: your younger students will probably not be happy about the F-chord, but they will have to start with it at some point! For newcomers I always start with a small F-chord - 1 string, or 2 strings or 3 strings. How texts help students count Use the familiarity of this Christmas song to counting. I recommend encouraging your student to sing the words while playing Jingle Bell's guitar tabs - singing lyrics while they play will help keep them in tune. For example, when they come to the half and whole notes, line 2 turns into jingle all the way -2 -2 -4! O what fun is riding (in-a) a horse O-Pen sledge -2 -eigh - 4! Now you can learn more about chord relationships... Music theory time! If your guitarist knows the timing of the chord changes, let them switch to another button with you. Talk about the I and V chords (1 and 5 chords), and hold your fingers up to count from C to G. C, D, E, F, G... Okay; C is the first chord, and G is the fifth chord in this line-up. This is the strongest family relationship of chords that exists! Even if they are a little familiar with the concept of me and V chords going together, it is good to review each lesson. How about playing in a higher or lower key? Can they change the keys without using music? What happens when we switch to the From G key? Help them think through: The I-chord would be G, of course, but what would be the V-chord? Hold your hand up, point to finger 1 and say: G... A... B... C... and stop letting them say D! Then Jingle Bells play with these two chords. Really learning the musical alphabet Saying the alphabet is simple, isn't it? But what about BACKWARDS? If your student has trouble remembering the musical alphabet, then you need to put it on their lesson sheet for a few weeks until they ARE VERY FAST A-B-C-D-E-F-G; G-F-E-D-C-B-A! Believe me, say the alphabet backwards fast is a lot of FUN. Make it a race!
