You can even shop online and collect the same from the drawer. Standard delivery takes 3 to 5 business days. Note that returns must be made within 14 days of receipt. The refund takes 2-5 days to get to your account. For more information or questions about payment, refund, cancellation, delivery or other persons, please contact Missguided Support. It is trusted by more than 6.1 million users and 95% of the S&P 500. Company Email Format Index Better Business Bureau: I reviewed the company's response in connection with complaint ID #***** and found that my complaint had not been resolved because: The company announced that it would send the package at no cost – as part of the resolution. They advised me that if the shipping company Skynet (which originally delivered me the wrong package) advised me to advise them (Aicha and her colleague) and ensure that she was charged back missguided. I contacted them twice, more than 5 days to report that the service is charged and this should be charged back to them as they stated. Unfortunately, they continue to ignore my emails so they were not complying with the agreed solution to this problem. They continue to play games and lie to their customers, and this is unacceptable. In order to allow the BBB to process answer, you need to answer the above question. Sincerely, ***** Warehouse Operations Warehouse Operations Team are engineering business. It is our responsibility to ensure that all inventory is booked into the warehouse and made available for purchase either on the website, in the store or through wholesale accounts within 24 hours of receipt. Grand Central is a 240,000 square foot warehouse with 5 floors and is managed through our partnership with XPO Logistics, who are very much part of the Missguided team. We process approximately 16 million units a year and hold reserves of around 3.2 million units at once. We provide Missguided and Mennace services both domestically and internationally and ensure that we provide excellent service to all our customers. We work daily with many other departments, such as purchasing and merchandising, supply chain, product, IT, finance, business and retail operations, to provide proactive support to their challenges. Carrier operations We are the ones who help provide our customers around the world... Behind the scenes, we manage relationships with more than fifteen carriers that help us serve our atmosphere around the world. To help with this, we manage many technical processes and together it allows us to deliver a game-changing customer delivery offer. We have one of the largest individual budgets in the industry therefore its important that we watch the E.V.E.R.Y penny. Whether it's one package or one full truck 'bring it to !!! We are everywhere and there is no doubt that innovation excites us. We're Missguided Distribution. Operational support Operational forecasting is where we start. Inbound and outbound volume forecasts are made daily, weekly, and quarterly and are shared with our warehouse operations team, carrier operations team, or customer service team. This helps operational planning capabilities, including warehouse staffing/shifts, trucks for carrier operations, and activity levels for our customer service center. It's the beginning of an operational plan, and we always have a plan... In addition, we also take care of many projects focusing on logistics, supply chain and reporting. We make sure that the rest of the operations team has all the data they need from different systems so that they can make informed decisions and support where we can to make sure that we lead the way to providing our customers with a leading offering in the market. Facilities, asset and risk management The separation of equipment, property and risk management is focused on the efficient and efficient provision of business support services. Facility Management supports business and its assets, buildings, technical infrastructure, lighting, transportation, furniture, land and other specific functions for colleagues. Our two broad areas of operation are commonly referred to as hard soft service. The first concerns a physically built environment with a focus on space and construction infrastructure. Later it applies to people and organization and is related to the psychology of work and physiology of work and basically ensures that we have a great job in place. Our colleagues are at the heart of our approach, so whether it's a problem with the availability of meeting rooms, heating and lighting in the workspace or concerns or questions about health and safety or business continuity, to name just three. Customer service customer service varied and fast pace and there to serve missguided customer. I made an order consisting of two items. That night, around midnight, they sent an automated e-mail saying that one of the items was in stock and a refund had been issued. A few hours later, a second item was sent. Why didn't a real living person make it? Since it was all automated responses, if I wanted to get the same item in a different size or color, I would have to pay off for shipping, again meet the minimum for Klarna (which is what I used the last order), and I hope this item was in stock instead of just changing the previous order before shipping. When I contacted customer support the next day, everyone had automatic replies again (I was a live chat agent, I can see through the canned statement). They said they'd return my package if I remedied my order. I tried to explain that this was not enough, because the klarna minimum was more than the cost of the item and will require more money out of pocket to redo. However, the chat was disconnected. I reached out to Facebook Messenger and their only response was that my previous order could not be credited or changed further. I watched asking for free shipping I was promised and never received another message. I'm out of almost $30 because I had to create a new order with paid postage. These automated responses are useful for large volumes, but you lack a key element of customer service that is actually to resolve the issues and concerns that a customer may have, even if it requires a thoughtful response from a real representative. I would never recommend this company and actively advise someone to stay away.

Away.
