The story of santa claus cartoon

Share Rachel KoretskySteven Whitestone VHS Cover. The Story of Santa Claus is an animated series directed by Toby Bluth, the brother of former Disney animator Don Bluth. It stars Ed Asner, Betty White and Tim Curry. Summary History opens in Europe, a long time ago. Nicholas Claus, nicknamed Santa by his wife Gretchen, is a toy manufacturer who wants him to be able to give toys to any child in the world. It was explained that Nicholas grew up in an Orphanage on Angel Island, where he learned to make toys for other children. However, Nicholas is now in debt because he is giving away more toys than he sells. The clauses are then evicted by their greedy owner, Mr Minch. Now penniless, Nicholas and Gretchen decide to take their remaining toys to the children at angel island orphanage. However, their ship is embroiled in a storm and are miraculously transported to the North Pole. There they meet elves, including the wizarding elf Nostros, his son Clement and the elf girl Aurora. When Nicholas saves Clement's life, the Nostros are forced to wish him well. Nicholas wants him to be able to deliver toys to all the children in the world on Christmas Day. Nostros declares that this is impossible and trying to fulfill it will exterminate the elves, destroying their magic. However, the wish can not be received, because it is now etched among the stars. Nicholas and Gretchen manage to recruit almost all the elves to help them. Soon they built a toy factory and started working. Nostros watches form from afar, mocking their attempt to do the impossible and forbidding Clement from getting involved. Clement is already eerily to help. On a big day, Aurora realizes that Santa claus will have to be accompanied by a magic expert on his journey. She goes to the Nostros, but he refuses, of course. After thinking about it for a while, he changes his mind and goes to the toy factory to help Santa Claus. When their journey around the world ends, Nicholas insists on stopping at angel island orphanage. He gives the young boy a knife so that he can wipe toys for others, just like Santa Claus used to. After returning to the North Pole, the Nostros and other elves vote to confer honor clauses on the elves, making them immortal. Santa claus declares that they will do it every year forever, and the elves cheer. Songs To Give Every Child in the World a Toy (performed by Jim Cummings) We're 5 to Pull It Off (performed by Jim Cummings, Miko Hughes, Kathryn Zaremba and Tim Curry) Clement's Song (performed by Jim Cummings and Miko Hughes) Performed by : Secret Santa Claus. The songs were written by Marie Maxwell and John Thomas. Tim Curry worked in 1996 in a more voice-over role and also expressed characters in Jumanja and Adventures of the Book of Virtues in the same year. Jim Cummings was known for his voice work and continued with other Christmas specials such as Beauty and the Beast: The Enchanted Christmas and The Life & Adventures of Santa Claus. The special aired on December 7, 1996 on CBS. In later years, the special offer was rebroadcasted. [6] It was released by 20th Century Fox Home Entertainment. Receptionist John Leonard, writing for New York, called the special a little less animated than the 1996 live action special Lady Santa Claus. Originally aired on CBS in 1996, it continues to air 2015 on the network. Starring Edward Asner as Nicholas Santa Claus (seven years before Elf) with Jim Cummings as Santa Claus Voice. Betty White as Mrs. Claus (a role she reprised two years later in The Noddy Shop: Anything Can Happen At Christmas, then again in Prep and Landing: Operation: Secret Santa) and Tim Curry as elf wizard Nostros. The special begins with Nicholas and Gretchen Claus running a store with knitting in old Europe. Selfless to blame, Nicholas hands out more toys than he sells. It turns out that this is not a solid business strategy, and indebted clauses are evicted by their greedy owner. Left with little more than clothes on their backs, clauses decide to give their remaining toys to the children at Angel's Island Orphanage, which was where Nicholas grew up, but their ship is overtaken by a storm. Miraculously, they are transported to the North Pole, where they meet a magical community of elves. Those with names include Nostros, his clumsy son Clement and the unbearable elf girl Genius Aurora. After Nicholas saves Clement's life, he has one wish. Nicholas wants him to be able to give thanks to every child in the world. Nostros is terrified. Even with the magic of the elves, this wish is impossible! But Nicholas gradually wins the elves to his dreams. The special offer contains the following tropes: An ambiguous period of time: The opening title is Europe, long ago. When exactly is it a long time ago? Late enough to make accurate maps of the world, but even before the Industrial Revolution, apparently. The fashions worn by human figures are vaguely Victorian. Changed my mind, Kid: Nostros at the end. Christmas Elves: In this version, elves live on the North Pole before clauses get there. Spoiled owner: Mr Minch, who evicts Santa and Ms Claus because of Santa's debt, is giving away more toys than he can sell. Father banning fantasy: Nostros tries (and continues to fail) to stop Clement from engaging in clauses. Gossipy Hens: At first, some are seen gossiping about clauses, providing us with exposure. Ms. Claus actually calls them the not to old chickens, I Want Song: To Give Every Child in the World a Toy is sung by Nicholas at the very beginning. Magic Goes Away: According to Nostros, if Santa's wish fails, all elves will lose their magic permanently. It almost happens, but when Santa claus and the elves return to the North Pole, they regain their magic. Outside the chart. Debt clauses go just beyond the chart in the ledger. Only six faces: Nostros, Clement and Aurora are virtually the only elves with a unique look. For everyone else, there is one project for elf boys, one project for elf girls, one project for elf soldiers, etc. Red and black and angry all over: a very Dickensian dress owner in this color scheme. Wizard's Robe and Hat: Nostros in this way. Smart Smart Wear glasses: Aurora wears glasses. Sour Supporter: Nostros, who expresses great skepticism about Santa's desire to give a dream to every child in the world, because the elves can lose their magic if the wish does not. At the end he has a change of heart. Spock Speak: As Aurora says, naturally. Villainy-Free Villain: Nostros is more or less regarded as a villain, but all he does is doubt the feasibility of Santa's wishes, which could destroy the magic of the elves if not met. Met.
