Share October 25, 2019 • 4 min read Facebook allows us to keep up with your profiles and stay connected every day. But there is a time when each of us wondered if there is any way in which we can see who visited our profile. Yes, Facebook Profile See Notification was created - Google Chrome, which no longer exists but replaced with a social profile view notification. Who checks your Facebook profile? While it is true that Facebook collects a huge amount of data about its users, including who has visited our do not share this data with anyone. Facebook cares about the privacy of its users, so they consider this data to be strictly confidential. In fact, it says that we should report any third-party application that claims to be able to give us this type of information. This means that such applications exist, but their accuracy is not proven. Not surprisingly, many of them give false information without value. These apps or companies ask them to give them permission to access your profile and private information. Not only that they can access private information, but they can also infect your device with malware or spread spam. Facebook considers our information confidential, so many apps that claim to show your viewers on Facebook are actually scams. Instead, they will have access to your social media profile accounts until you manually cancel it. What about the social profile view notification? A social profile view notification or Facebook Profile Browser is a Google Chrome extension that says it can send you notifications every time someone visits your profile. According to users, however, extension alerts only if the person who viewed your profile is the user of the extension as well. How to install and use this extensionSou find the social profile view notification extension in the Chrome Web Store and install the plug-in. Then log in to your Facebook profile account and a new menu called Visitors will appear on your Facebook Page. When you press it, a pop-up will appear with a list of Facebook users along with the date they visited. So, when someone watches your profile, you'll see a notification revealing their name and time of visit, as long as they're also users of the extension. It sounds too simple to be true because it only requires a Chrome browser and a plug-in to be installed, but that's what this extension claims. Keep in mind that this has nothing to do with Facebook because Facebook cares about the privacy of its users. Conclusion Wondering if you can really see who visited your Facebook profile? Although Facebook doesn't show this information because it considers it sensitive data, there are third-party apps that claim to show you Facebook visitors. One of them is a Google Chrome extension called Social Profile View Notification. Although its accuracy is not proven, it is up to you to decide whether you intend to use it and believe that the data it provides.
