Book this: Get prices from Loews Regency and other San Francisco hotels to Palace Hotel TripAdvisor, LLC Supposedly the grand dame of San Francisco hotels, the Palace Hotel was originally built in 1875. After it was mostly destroyed by an earthquake, it was rebuilt in 1909, finally establishing a standard of luxury hotels in San Francisco. The interiors here are nothing but extraordinary, from the lobby's imperialistally high ceilings to the warm oak walls of Pied Piper Bar and important works of art. But the hotel's crown jewel, no one disputes, is its Garden Court restaurant, which looks like it has the power to work out a dream: Its dome is made of 72,000 pieces of iridescent stained glass and dazzled with chandeliers made of Austrian crystal. The rooms are more modern, though more modern, with tall windows and marble details made in plum and grey tones. The hotel's palatial indoor pool (ideal for SF's unpredictable weather) opens onto the skyline and every staff here is generously attentive. Amenities include: pillowtop four-poster beds, luxury bed linen, marble baths, rain shower heads, a 48-inch LED TV, lots of special features, heated indoor pool, 24-hour fitness center, business center, free coffee in the lobby, dry cleaning and laundry service, babysitting services, free shoe shine, currency exchange and translation services, legendary Pied Bar & Grill.
