Humbucker in the neck, split coil of the leg or standard tele pickup. Ordering your body today will be a fun project and a great guitar. Good luck. Embark on your bad ego. Rondo has a single binding but maple neck with hh surf green telew. Expect updates. Embark on your bad ego. Rondo has a single binding but maple neck with hh surf green telew. Expect updates. I believe the OP's guitar will far surpass Rondo's offering. They do offer some interesting looking guitars, but in my experience you get what you pay for, sometimes much less. The sub$400 guitar is at the level of squirrel affinity and requires a significant amount of time To make anything I would even consider a goalkeeper remotely. I'm really interested in seeing what the OP is cooking. Think of that body, mighty mitt 22 fret rosewood neck, perhaps even 70s neck or at least stratwood so I can get a big logo on it, I'm not sure the pickup will be yet, something noisy but low output. And yes, Rondo music can have some cool stuff out there, but lack of quality. I've never owned it, but there are a lot of people around this part. Basically all of the guitars, pots, wires, pickups, consumption, and even remotely all of the interiors need to be replaced for good sound. Most needed a relevel of frets too. It is a powerful and wonderful project. The SD Alnico Pro II 4 conductor of the leg with blacktop tilerton neck will be your favorite. I'm not sure what noisy, low output means. Is it a vintage PAF that is not flowering? Or low output P-90? It is a powerful and wonderful project. The SD Alnico Pro II 4 conductor of the leg with blacktop tilerton neck will be your favorite. I'm not sure what noisy, low output means. Is it a vintage PAF that is not flowering? Or low output P-90? Maybe a PAF clone. PAFs and other guitars will be pretty cool... Where did you order the corpse? You should order your body carefully, because the heel may not be compatible with the fender/fender license neck. Great project, we have a similar taste... I'm not sure if you ordered a neck yet, but these people do a real good job: - Musikraft LLC I recently ordered one for the client's Warmos Strat, it absolutely doesn't require more fret work. They are also sold on eBay. You don't get the luxury of picking up details, but they can go substantially less than if you place an order: Telecaster Guitar Neck Musikraft Fender License Maple DarkWood | PS on eBay, when I say these people do a real good job, I underestimate their product quality. It's much better than fender custom shop and is made like a tank. I have one of their telenecks, and it will surpass me, my son and probably his son too. Mine (I wish it was) but here is my favorite build. I'd like to say that the classic tele-single coil on the bridge is a good place to start. A pair of neck humbuckers is the right way for my ears. There are a few Humbucker telebridge pickups that sound pretty good, but that is not the same as a bright single coil. That's a good color btw... Can't wait to hear back about the sound and how to play. Great project. I want to have Bixby and Tele. I would go to TV Jones Fuss or Roller . . .
