Create .info and .module to customize the module. Write features hook_menu and hook_permissions Settings Admin Form and use hook_form_alter Create database tables using hook_schema and .install files Write node hooks and database requests Create a custom block through the Theme Block module and write to CSS to style it using t features and other disinfection features to ensure your module is used and creating custom drupal variables By completing short tasks and eventually weave the task together to get a completed and fully functional module. The development of the Drupal 7 module introduces you to the development of the module, understanding the basic hooks and functions, building tables and requesting the Drupal database, exploring the module's safety, performance and how our module interacts with the Drupal core and modules. Each video goes through the basic functions of Drupal and demonstrates how to use these features in the module that we are building in practice together Drupal 7 Development Module begins by showing you how to customize the local development environment to support the development of the user module. You'll learn how to use the best tools and customize them. Next, you'll learn how to set up a channel importer to import content to your site, which you'll then use using the user module and write a menu callback using hook_menu and hook_permissions. Then we'll look at the form api and write the hook_form_alter function and create a .install file and create a db diagram function to create a table in our database Finally we create a block using our module and thematic block. We'll set the course up, looking at our module in terms of safety and performance. From Development prior to the security review we build a custom module step by step for a short video course. About Trevor Trevor is a Drupal developer based in Middletown, Maryland, USA. Trevor has been using Drupal intensively since 2007 and has been designing websites for more than 15 years, using a combination of HTML, CSS, ColdFusion, PHP, j'y and JavaScript. Trevor focuses on building Drupal-based web applications and portals for educational, nonprofit, and medical systems, as well as small business environments. He is interested in better ways to integrate web services with Drupal sites, optimize the performance of Drupal sites, and use Drupal content types, views, panels, and other modules to develop interface interfaces with interfaces that support intense data websites. He loves teaching people about Drupal and how to use this excellent open source content management system. Framework.
