[1] The magazine covers celebrity news, music, movies, fashion, sports and features exclusive interviews with many well-known figures in popular culture. Published every two weeks, the magazine offers the latest news to millions of young Americans identifying with hip hop culture. September 13, 2016, Hip Hop Weekly was acquired with an undisclosed amount by CJB Investments LLC. The history of Hip Hop Weekly was founded in 2006 by Ray Benzino Scott (Source magazine, Love & & Atlanta) and Dave Mays (co-founder of The Source). [passage required] In an interview with the New York Observer, Mays said he and Scott came up with the idea after the success of magazines such as Entertainment Weekly and US Weekly and wanted to fill the void that exists for weekly hip hop news. Hip Hop Weekly has issued special issues that commemorate a special moment in pop culture history or a taste of the city's music icons. The release of this collecting edition includes typical issues honoring the lives of Michael Jackson and Whitney Houston, Behind the Mic docuzines on Jay Z, Beyoncé, and Lil Wayne among others. In 2010, the magazine issued a typical 3-D swimming issue. The Hip Hop Weekly Award was awarded by The Best City Magazine three years in a row at the Bandar Music Awards. [passage required] Next to Blow In recent years, Hip Hop Weekly has managed to appoint an underground artist who has gone on to achieve mainstream success. In a section of the magazine titled Next to Blow, HHW staff divided the artists they felt were on the verge of becoming the country's name. Past artists featured in Next to Blow include Kaya Homie Quan, Ty Dolla $ign, Kidd Kidd, Young Thug, Trinidad James, Doe B, Troy Ave and Def Jam signee August Alsina.
