Brandy and Monica's historic Battle of Verse is ahead of us. After more than two decades of breakups, makeups and chart-topping hits, two R&B divi will go head-to-head in an Instagram Live battle to show their fans how talented they are today. Verzuz is the latest phenomenon of the musical battle that has taken over social networks since the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic, artists were unable to do shows and they came to rely on social media to communicate with their fans and give impromptu performances. Hip-hop producers Timbaland and Swizz Beatz first ran the show, and the battles have been going on almost weekly ever since. Many of the biggest names in hip-hop and R&B have faced battles in Verses. Recent brooks are Alicia Keys vs. John Legend, Nelly vs. Ludacris, and Rick Ross vs. 2 Chainz. Some battles have had particular historical or cultural significance, such as DMX v Snoop Dogg pitting East Coast rap against West Coast rap. And while it's meant to be a competition to see who wins, it's all done in good entertainment as a way of entertaining fans, as everyone else is locked up at home. Given the history of Brandy and Monica, this Verses battle is important in more ways than one. It transcends music, Brandy and Monica's Rocky Bond goes back a long time in the mid-1990s, Brandy and Monica were two young teenagers who both had a love for Whitney Houston and dreamed of being a professional singer. In 1998, they joined forces for the platinum-selling hit The Boy is Mine, which became the first hit by both singers on the Billboard charts. All the time, things weren't so exciting for the singers in the background. Tensions soothed as they battled for the spotlight; Monica even admitted at the 1998 MTV Video Music Awards that Brandy had hit the backstage, which remains their only show. The Boy is Mine to date. The two remained in a somewhat Cold War as their careers took off in the following years. Things seem to have finally warmed up in 2012, when they sat down again for single It All Belongs to Me, although they turned around again by 2016. Ahead of the long-awaited meeting, Monica told ET that she was ready to turn the page. She posted a throwback clip from 106 & Park on Instagram in 2012 when she was asked what her favorite song Monica was. It's so hard to choose, Brandy likes. But she also has a favorite, and she's still her favorite to date. My favorite song I always sing is 'Angel' on your first album [Miss Thang], she told Monica. I don't know if you remember, but I used to sing that song all the time. Monica's response was honest and perfect. Actually, I don't even remember the words of that song! Recognize. She laughs and defends by saying she was only 12 when she recorded the album and that she forgot some lyrics along the way. Brandy explains that she remembers all her lyrics to both of their songs, and Monica even admits to helping her remember them in performances. But Verse's battle is a contest, so don't expect Brandy to be so kind this time. The format is becoming a popular genre for publishers, who create more content for their artists, as well as a new field for animators to explore. Lyric videos are different from karaoke videos, and from videos with closed captions as far as the lyric video, the presentation is intended for artistic works that serve as part of the entire creative output. The creative direction for lyric videos is usually very open. Budgets are usually not huge, but the plant is usually quite fast. It's also a field that's just being shinged; More and more bands and publishers, including many superstar performers, often release videos. Although not as respected as official videos and sometimes applied to fill content, lyric videos are a new niche for animators. The field grows fast and can be capitalized if you're interested in recording a video with animation and focusing on song lyrics.
