With an airy falsetto that comes effortlessly from his richly expressive tenor voice, León Larregui is best known as the charismatic frontman and guitarist for Latin Grammy Award-winning Mexican neo psych-rock veterans Zoé. He is also a mapping solo artist and noted collaborator who has worked with many top-flight Latin artists, including Enrique Bunbury, Natalia LaFourcade, Carla Morrison, and Mon Laferte, to name a few. His diverse writing style melds sophisticated pop melodies with Latin and rock rhythms and juxtaposes organic instruments with electronic ones. He and Morrison cut the single Mensajero, which became a regional hit on American indie rock radio. He also cut a few duets with LaFourcade, including Rue Vieille Du Temple. In 2015 he appeared with Bunbury during the latter's MTV Unplugged episode. Larregui was born in Cuernavaca to a Mexican father and Italian mother. Given his father's job, the family moved around quite a bit. First it was to Mexico City then Torreon, then back to Cuernavaca for high school, where he learned to play guitar. He university at Mexico City's National School of Painting, Sculpture and and and got his degree in plastic art and animation. It was there that he met future Zoé guitarist Sergio Acosta, also originally from Cuernavaca. Larregui worked for a time as a graphic animator in cinema with some success, but times were lean. With his photogenic good looks, he got a gig with Armani as a fashion model to pay the bills. In 1995, during his modeling and acting career, he appeared in the lead role in Shakira's hit video for See Quiere. See Mata. In 1997, after attending a concert together, Larregui and Acosta Zoé formed with Jesús Báez (keyboards) and Ángel Mosqueda (bass). The drummer Rodrigo Guardiola came later. The band's path to success took some time. Early on, although they were signed to Sony, the music industry was too frustrating for them and they split up for a short time. The band worked on film scores and serial music for commercials to make ends meet. They got their break at the end of 2005 with an independently released EP for Noiselab. The title The Room, it went gold. Their first album for the label, 2006's Memo Rex Commander y el Corazón Atómico de la Vía Láctea, entered the Mexican charts at number one and then went gold. They issued two more albums to the record label, both hits, and signed eMI for 2009's Reptilectric Revisitado. The activity period from 2005-2011 was intense: the band toured almost constantly, released a number of self-made videos and made film and recording work. After issuing the soundtrack to their Música de Fondo: MTV Unplugged in 2011, Larregui told the band that he needed a break. In August 2012, EMI released its debut solo album, Solstis. It entered the Mexican charts inside the Top 10 and was eventually certified first gold, then double platinum, thanks to the success of its second single, Brillas. After a short trip, Larregui returned to Zoé in Prográmaton in 2013. As a solo artist, he had the band's full support, as the songs he wrote for himself were completely different from the band's music. Larregui continued to record and tour with Zoé, but also took tours with Bunbury and others; he did side work on other artists' recordings, too. In 2016, Larregui issued his sophomore solo LP, Volúma, through Universal. Employing styles as diverse as cumbia and ranchera, bossa nova, classic rock, and electronica, it landed inside the Top 10 on the Latin pop charts, and became a mapping streaming and download entry, too. He followed it later that year with the EMI-released remix set, Volumixes, and in 2017 with the charts live album Metropolis, while continuing his role as frontman for Zoé. As a soloist he recorded two albums: in 2012 he released his album Solstis, with which the song Brillas y Souvenir was recognized, four years later in 2016 featured Volúma Locos. A year later he was reunited with the band Zoé to create the album Aztlan and release it in 2018 Biography First Son of Rubén Larregui del Toro and María Jeannina Marín Tommasi. Her younger sister bears the same name as her mother. [3] Because of his father's work, he was forced to change the family residence several times. Leon lived his first years in Mexico City, later in Torreón, returned to Cuernavaca in high school, and later was back in Mexico City to study at university. [1] From his return to Cuernavaca, he met Sergio Acosta, a musician born in Torreón with whom he would later partner to form what would be the band that today represents. [4] He began studying the careers of Plastic Arts at the National School of Painting, Sculpture and Engraving La Esmeralda. At the time he worked as a graphic animator, as well as being involved in the art of many films during this period. [2] She appeared in the video for Colombian singer Shakira's song See want, see mata play Braulio. [5] León Larregui created the band with Sergio Acosta on 28 April [6] After fifteen years in the band, in 2012, he decided to launch himself as a soloist, but he noted himself that the band would not split up and that his solo career would be completely different from what he does on Zoé, so as not to create competition with his band. [7] In 1997, together with Sergio Acosta, Jesús Báez and Ángel Mosqueda, he formed the psychedelic rock band Zoé. [8] The lyrics to his songs speak mainly of spiritual search, making references to the universe (he himself has explained that as a child he wanted to be an astronomer) and science fiction metaphorically, a style that he has found difficult for the public to understand. He also writes about stories he invents himself, anecdotes, movies, things he reads or hears. In December 2011, he said he would take a short break with Zoé, but that he planned to resume the realization of The band's next album in the middle of the same year, with a view to releasing it in 2013. [9] He also mentioned that he was about to release a solo album in the summer of 2012. Some Zoé fans expressed their expectations.
