Irwin laser guide for mitre saw

This item does not belong on this page. Thank you, we'll see about that. I've tried many times to buy a laser guide on E Bay without success - they went on between 35 and 45 pounds with carriage. As a last resort I tried Ebay.com and found a buynow price delivered at a rate of 25.52 euros from 64ernie. Its terms say the delivery will be at least 28 days - the mine was delivered within 7 days. What a result Hello Barry, I've seen these many times on ebay and even betting on one or two, but the prices got too high for my taste..... I could give this guy a shot though... What do you think of the laser is good? What's your drink? Cheers SimonA Simon I hope to get into the workshop and match it on Tuesday, so I'll let you know. Simon, one of the promotional pieces on the Woodworking Channel shows a guy retro-installation and using a laser guide on, I think DeWalt mitre has seen. Not sure how often the addition pops up, but it might help you decide whether you think they are any good. Hope it helps:wink: Paul Errr ... don't know if you know this, but Axminster sell them for 16.56 pounds. See here for information. The only reason I know I was browsing the Axminster catalog the other day and came across it. I installed a laser on my dewalt 701 mitre seen today - went very well, but the movable security saw just touching the laser disk. It looks like the guard has been pressed heavily and has a bit of excess metal that is causing problems I have to either use my meat grinder or drimmel to remove the excess. I'll try to finish it tomorrow. I only got a round to remove the excess on the blade of the guard next to the gazebo, which concerned the laser guide. Eventually I had to remove about 5mm to make sure it didn't touch. What difference with the laser - necessarily - the total time screensaver. Hi Barry I just came across your post I hope you don't mind whether this laser guide fits the elektra bekam slip miter seen? The best relationship Hi Barry I just came across in your post I hope you don't mind whether this laser guide fits the elektra bekam slip miter seen? I don't think he's going to see it. Barry last visited Thu Dec 28, 2006 12:42pm, 7 years ago. Mick Hi Leptus, I just saw this post myself and think I'll be getting one in the near future for my RAGE3-B. From what I've read it will fit almost anyone, but you may need the top to change the kerb blade you use or remove and grind the guard blade. Cheers Mark Thank You sign I hope you let us know how you got on please post a photo or video to see how it worked for you. Best relationship Chaps ... I've been umming and ahing about laser guides for a while now. Given your recent experience.... Are they good? By which I mean are they really accurate? I use my chopsaw for cabinet-making work basically so can't afford the 1mm tolerance type of rough work often used in construction. Obvious advantage advantage The laser will be great, but I'm stuck with the idea of it aiming for less accurate needs. Tell me I'm wrong, please everything I read (didn't use one myself) indicates that it's exactly as soon as it's setup. I didn't add a laser show to the left of the blade. Obviously since it's set to the left of it, but once you take the hat into account everyone seems to say it's a shrinking spot. Some people said they draw a laser sign others draw it to the blade and place the material as needed. I don't see the point of these things, it's just a gimmick if you can't see the stain on something maybe you should do gardening or cooking. All about time though it's not a master if it saves you some time lining up sullen it's worth it. Oth
