Glimmer the hunger games actor

Bow and arrows (book and movie)Knife (film)Uh, the names people give their children in District One are so ridiculous. -Katniss Everdeen on the Glitter name Glitter was the female tribute from District 1 in the 74th Hunger Games. Along with her district partner, Marvel, she was a member of the Career pack that teamed up to chase the weaker competitors. She was indirectly killed by Katniss Everdeen, who lost a nest of tracker jackers on the Career pack as they slept. Biography Early life Glitter was born in District 1, one of the richest districts, and one that is known for producing career tributes. She probably spent most of her life training for games and because of this, she probably volunteered for the 74th Hunger Games. 74. Hunger Games Glitter and Marvel in their parade costumes. During the Tribute Parade, Glitter, along with her district partner Marvel, was spray painted silver and wore tunics. But in the film, they were dressed in fuchsia outfits covered in shiny sequins and feathers representing their district's main export: luxury goods. Training Glimpse at Training Center. Glitter learning archery Glitter tribute token was the only known in the history of the Hunger Games to be confiscated. The gemstone of the ring she brought, when twisted, revealed a poisoned spike. She was not arrested because no one could prove that she knew the ring is a weapon, but her token was confiscated anyway. Glitter was not to be underestimated. As one of the career tributes, she had a good chance of survival and was ready to fight. During her private session with Gamemakers, Glitter probably showed Gamemakers her archery skills (in the book, however, Katniss said it's immediately obvious that she's incompetent with a bow). Interview Glitter with Caesar on her interview. Glimmer's interview with Caesar went very well when she did a great job and saw the part wearing a provocative see-through gold dress in the book, although in the film it was a short, light-pink dress, and she told Caesar that I am very prepared for the games. It is said that the crowd went wild at the sight of her. Katniss described her as sexy and prolific, and that her mentor had no trouble coming up with an interview angle for her. Katniss guessed that she would probably get many sponsors, because of her appearance during the interview. Cornucopia carnage Glitter pushes her knife out of District 6 woman after stabbing her to death. She stands on the pedestal next to Rue and District 3 male. When the gong rings, Glitter, like most tributes, runs toward Cornucopia. Glitter tries to steal the District 6 woman's sleeping bag, but she's able to run away. After some attempts, the mica manages to throw the girl to the ground, get on top of her, and stab her to death. Then grabs the yellow sleeping bag and runs, only to collide with the District 10 male. District 10 male takes the sleeping bag and runs. Mica runs past Thresh into Cornucopia. Glitter screams as District 6 male is about to kill her. District 10 man grabs hold of her arm. Glitter slaps his face, grabs him by the back of his neck and pins him on a box and tries to cut him many times, but he is too fast for her. The District 6 male pushes her to the ground, making Glitter scream. He's about to kill her when Cato pushes him away. Glitter grabs a sword and watches as Cato kills District 6 male. She goes inside to look for supplies as the bow waits for her outside. During the games Cato and Glitter attempt to attack Katniss while she is in a tree hiding. The career discovered Peeta and allowed him into the pack so they could get to Katniss. During the first night, career gigs stumble upon the District 8 female who made a fire in the middle of the night. Glitter killed her, assisted by Peeta and Cato. After fire havoc, Glitter and the other career members were not as fast as before. Later, Glitter found Her with the Career package Katniss and chased her up a tree. When Cato decided to go up the tree Katniss was trapped in, Glitter offered him her bow and arrows, but he refused as he could do better with his sword. When Cato fell out of the tree because of his weight, Glitter decided to try, but she quickly realized that the branches wouldn't support her either. It was obvious that she was not familiar with the bow and arrows as she did not keep the arrows straight and had difficulty nocking the arrow to bowstring. But in the film, she seems to have a little experience with a bow and arrow. When she fires at Katniss and misses, Katniss teases her by grabbing the arrow and swinging it around to bother her for her lack of knowledge (in the film, Glimmer and Cato both shoot arrows at Katniss and miss, prompting Katniss to wrestle. Why don't you try to throw the sword?). Furious, Glitter agrees with Peeta that the package should wait for Katniss to come down on her own as she won't be able to escape without them knowing so they sleep under the tree, a decision that would eventually lead to her death. Death glimmer is being attacked by tracker jackers. Glitter was killed by tracker jackers that Katniss, who was initially informed of the nest of Rue, sent down on Career Tributes by cutting off the branch that held it. Glitter, Clove, Marvel, Cato, District 4 girl (in the book), and Peeta were camping at the bottom of the tree where Katniss was hiding. Shocked by the sudden attack, everyone except Glitter and the girl from District 4 fled to the lake. Flashes screamed hysterically for help, but no one came back for her. Due to her many stings, Glitter soon collapsed and began twitching and groaning the tracker jacker hallucinations, and District 4 girl died later. Unfortunately for Glitter, her death was not quick, and for several minutes after collapsing, her heart kept beating and she fell into a coma. Glimpse after tracker jackers attack. When Katniss returns to the bow and arrows, she notices that she didn't recognize Glitter anymore, as the venom had inflated her body grotesquely, and her plum-sized sting was oozing green pus and was bursting. When she touched one of the pimple-like wounds on Glitter's shoulder, it dissolved into her hand. But there is a chance that this did not happen as Katniss experienced hallucinations herself. Katniss shielded Glitter's body from being taken away by the hovercraft and desperately tried to take the bow and arrows from her, breaking many of her mutated, petrified fingers with a stone, finally getting her hand on the Glitter shoulder blade, she draws glimpses on her side to retrieve the quince of arrows of arrows. In the film there were no green pus, so it may mean that what Katniss saw in the book was a hallucination. Glitter was ranked 12th out of the 24 tributes, making it halfway. Legacy Mutation Glitter resurfaced towards the end of the Hunger Games to kill the remaining tributes as a dog. She along with Marvel, Clove, Foxface, Rue, Thresh, and the other 15 unnamed tributes all appeared as mutations from the Capitol, which was a combination of the fallen tribute DNA and a wolf. She was the first mutt Katniss recognized as each having a characteristic of the fallen tribute. Glitter's wolf shape was lean with silky-lace fur, shiny emerald eyes that were unmistakably humanoid, and number 1 on its jeweled collar. Mutt eyes tipped Katniss off that mutations were the fallen tributes. Katniss killed Glimmer's mutt with an arrow through his neck as it tried to climb cornucopia. After the Games in prison, Katniss and Peeta go to District 1 for their victory tour and see Glimmer's family. Peeta takes up painting as a hobby, and one of the paintings is of Glitter's mutt attack. Throughout history Katniss has nightmares, sometimes involving Glitter's bloated body after tracker jacker attack and her mutt shape. Physical description Katniss described Glitter being tall, with emerald green eyes and flowing blonde hair. She was described as beautiful and sexy, like most tributes from District 1. Katniss described her interview dress as sing-scratching gold and provocative. She is described as being around 5'7. She used her appearance to her advantage, trying to get sponsors. Weapons Glimpses showed little regard for choosing his weapon at Cornucopia. But it is not known if the bow would have been her first choice as a weapon or if she had taken any other weapon from Cornucopia. She also had a more feminine version of Cato's sword she had strapped to the side of her pants. During the carnage in the film, Glitter used a knife to stab the District 6 woman to death. For the rest of the games until her death, she utilized a bow and arrow that Katniss would later take from her corpse and use for the rest of the games until her victory. Katniss described Glitter as incompetent when using the arch. Victims It is unknown exactly how many people Glitter killed. In the novel, Katniss never saw her kill anyone. In the film, she killed the District 6 woman and the District 5 male by repeatedly stabbing them to death, and presumably killing the District 8 woman with Cato's sword. Trivia Glitter's Tribute Id card in the novel, Glitter and her district partner Marvel are described as being spray-painted silver for the wagon thieves, but in the film they are wearing fuchsia feathered costumes. Glitter's district token was a gemstone ring, but it was eliminated by the review board before the Games after it was found that it carried a secret weapon: if the gemstone was twisted, a poisoned spike would pop out of the ring. In the film, Glitter acts flirty against Cato. She talks and jokes with him about the fire, sleeps next to him that night, and even snuggles into his arm. But the relationship is largely one-sided, and Cato leaves her to die to tracker jackers. In the film, Glitter has the lowest odds in her career, those being 7-1. She is tied with District 7 and Foxface, each with a 7-1 chance to win. [1] On Twitter, Kara Petersen (who portrayed the District 6 woman) confirmed that she was killed by Glitter; she is seen being stabbed at Cornucopia before Katniss falls with her backpack. In the Tribute Guide, Glitter is the only career tribute to not having a favored weapon, even though she carries a bow and arrows in the films. In the film, Glitter weighs 130 pounds. [1] Glitter survived for five days in the book and three days in the film. In the film, she survived about 3 days, 6 hours, and 26 minutes into the Games, according to the board behind Caeser, when Katniss goes to cut the Tracker Jacker nest free. In the Hunger Games Adventures, the player interacts with Glitter while she's in District 1, and she explains that her father is an artisan who makes flowers (namely tulips) out of finely forged crystal.
