The operation of large commercial motor vehicles requires specialised skills and training to be learn. CDL is a professional license allowing licensees to drive those large commercial vehicles and buses on public roads in Texas and the United States. This license shows that you have been trained, tested and qualified to operate large commercial motor vehicles safely. What types of CDL exist? To get a CDL, you'll need to determine which class you'll need. There are three basic CDL classes: Class A – Allows the holder to operate any combination of vehicles with a gross weight rating of 26,001 pounds or more, provided that the gross vehicle weight assessment (GVWR) of towed vehicles or vehicles exceeds 10,000 pounds. Class B – Allows the holder to operate any single vehicle with a GVWR of 26,001 pounds or more, someone one of these vehicles towing a vehicle not exceeding 10,000 pounds of GVWR, and any vehicle designed to carry 24 passengers or more, including the driver. If the skill test is on a bus with a GVWR of less than £26,001, the holder will be limited to running buses below £26,001 GVWR. Class C — Allows the holder to operate any single vehicle or combination of vehicles which is not class A or Class B if the vehicle is intended to carry 16 to 23 passengers, including the driver, or used in the carriage of dangerous materials requiring the vehicle to be labelled under 49 CFR, Part 172, Subpart F. What are certificates? Depending on what you're shipping, you may need one or more of the following six confirmations. The confirmation allows you to operate certain types of commercial motor vehicles and transport specific items. There is additional testing required to obtain approval, and in some cases, if you already have a CDL you will need to hold commercial student permission for this confirmation for at least 14 days before being able to add it to your CDL. Double/Triple Trailer (T confirmation) – This confirmation will allow you to pull a double or triple trailer. Passenger (P confirmation) - This confirmation allows you to operate a vehicle that carries a specific number of passengers. Tank vehicle (N certificate) – This certificate allows you to operate a tank vehicle. These vehicles are intended for the safe transport of liquid or liquefied gaseous materials. Hazardous materials (H) – This certificate allows you to transport hazardous materials such as flammable or flammable liquids, gases or explosives. You're going to have to complete a comprehensive state and federal background check. For more information, please visit our Materials Confirmation website. School Bus (S) – This confirmation allows you to operate a school bus. Combination N and H (X) – This combined support allows the transport of hazardous materials in tank vehicles. With the exception of motorcycles, if you hold a valid CDL, you may drive all vehicles in the class for which this license is issued, including your personal vehicle, provided that all relevant restrictions and certificates are complied with. What is the difference between Interstate and Intrastate? When applying for a CDL, you will need to understand what type of business you will be running so that you can be issued with the correct type of license. You can apply for a CDL that allows transportation of either interstate and/or intrastate trade. If you are applying for an interstate CDL business, it will allow you to operate in interstate and intra-state trade, unless you apply for an interstate CDL specifically for operation within a certain capacity. The definition of interstate and domestic trade is given below to help you determine what type of business you will be operating in and the appropriate form that you will need when applying for a CDL. You can only certify on one form and one section. Interstate Commerce Is trade, transportation, or transportation; Within the United States, between a location in a state and a location outside of that state or outside the U.S., or between two locations in a state through another state or outside the United States. In order to operate in an interstate store, you must be able to confirm that you meet the requirements set out in either the Interstate Driver Certification Form (CDL-4) or the Physical Exemption Certification Form (CDL-10). Intrastate Commerce Is the transport of assets (commodities) where: The place of origin and destination are within a single state and state line, or the international border is not crossed in order to operate in the intrastate store, you must be able to confirm that you meet the requirements in only one of the sections in the Intrastate Driver Certification form (CDL-5). The carrier shall be an indicator of whether the consignment or commodity is interstate or national. If there is no Bill of Lading then the origin and destination of the shipment will be an indicator. Requirements for medical certification Once you have determined which form you will certify in, please read the instructions on the form very carefully to see if provide and maintain a certificate from the current medical examiner in the department.
