Page 2 6 Comments Kaiserslautern, Germany - Thrift Savings Plan has issued a warning about mobile applications that say it could compromise the security of participant accounts. Messages posted on the plan's website Tuesday warn: These applications are not sponsored by TSP. TSP, the federal retirement savings plan, previously warned users about certain applications available through Apple's App Store (TSP Fund) and asked users for account login information. The TSP website spread the warning Tuesday, citing many mobile applications that may refer to the Thrift Savings Plan and ask for TSP account credentials. Warned TSP participants to provide these details to the app. If you provide these details, you will see the message Account security may be compromised. The warning also said the plan can not support any information or advice given by the app. TSP doesn't have its own mobile app. Google's Play Store for Android phones includes at least two TSP-related apps: TSP information from Developer Dominion Night. And F.R.U. - TSP price tracker from Kigra software. Calls to TSP and Apple were not returned by the deadline. The developer of the TSP Fund app, iSystems Integrator, does not have the contact information listed on the website and could not get a comment. No e-mail to Dominion Knight and Kigra Software was returned at the time of the deadline. Life Cycle (L) funds are made with each of the following individual funds: Experienced investors can customize asset allocation with five individual funds and invest in domestic and international stocks from short-term government securities.
