Together, HMM & HISTORY® into social studies streaming video and interactive features that bring content to life for students and they make connections between past and present. Meeting the needs of all students is not an easy task. That's why Houghton Mifflin Harcourt created World History: Patterns of Interaction. Designed to engage students in the narrative while integrating rich multimedia assets, the program brings content to life for students and enriches their understanding. - The publisher. Teacher: M. CisnerosRoom: A-210Course: World HistoryText: World History: Patterns of Interaction World History course is an academic, year-long course focusing on the development of human interaction and global processes that have shaped history since 1000. In addition to textbooks, students will be engaged through a variety of sources, including primary source documents, maps, simulations, plays, discussions, videos, lectures and computer technology tasks. Remember, students are expected to come prepared at all times! Furthermore, an important part of the history of learning is the discussion of different aspects of any topic. Discussions are an open forum for students to express their views in an environment of tolerance, understanding and honesty. All students are expected to come to classes with an open mind, listen to others and respect different opinions. What's this course about? Welcome to world history. In this course we will seek an understanding of the history of the world. Our goals will be to better appreciate the relevance of the past in our lives, to learn about ourselves. Our study will focus on major civilizations in the world, although we will consider what is often called the Western World (the United States and Western Europe) less thoroughly than we look at other parts of the world. We will primarily consider these regions to be a consequence of direct or indirect contact with the non-Western world or as a result of major developments and/or changes in global exchange patterns. In addition to learning this content, we will strive to improve writing, speech and critical and analytical thinking skills. Photography has prompted a dramatic change in the way we perceive history. Amazing historical photos like these can make it look like you stood right there during that historic moment. Books and pictures have documented history far back, but there is nothing like photography that will give you the feeling of looking at something real. Photography can still misdirect the viewer, but it's still more faithful than a picture or book. Four thousand years of world history. The relative power of modern states, nations and empires.
