I'm not robot

reCAPTCHA

Continue

I'm not robot

reCAPTCHA

Blues watch party enterprise

Fans of the St. Louis Blues had to wait a long time to see their team return to the Stanley Cup finals. They've watched so many teams over the years that were good, but ultimately not good enough. The road this season certainly wasn't typical or light, but nonetheless here the Blues are in Game 7 of the Stanley Cup Finals and their fans have been given a lot to cheer about. The Bruins were able to control the game for long stretches in the first period, but it was the Blues who held a 2-0 lead going into the break. It's a road game for them, but enterprise center st. louis is packed with fans glued to the game. Here's their reaction to Ryan O'Reilly putting the Blues up 1-0: They seem a little excited @stlouisblues Game 7 to watch the party (? kkriegs44/IG) #StanleyCup pic.twitter.com/GwXWuP11qh - #StanleyCup Game 7 on NBC (@NHLonNBCSports) June 13, 2019 Naturally, it's far from the only local Blues fans to gather tonight. Many gathered at Busch Stadium, too, despite the rain: And of course fans are Jacks NYB, the home of the Blues Play Gloria tradition. #PlayGloria @thejacksnyb again. Sorry if the video bouncing floor shaking inside the bar. pic.twitter.com/SD4cd406VD — Adam Kimelman (@NHLAdamK) June 13, 2019 Image from outside @thejacksnyb pic.twitter.com/U9LEBQX7wa - Adam Kimelman (@NHLAdamK) June 13, 2019 the Blues were able to maintain a 2-0 edge in the second period, putting them potentially 20 minutes away from their first championship. - Ryan Dadoun is a writer for Pro Hockey Talk on NBC Sports. Drop him the line phtblog@nbcsports.com or follow him on Twitter @RyanDadoun. Fans are invited to the corporate center for each road game in the Stanley Cup Finals to watch the game on the arena video board in the home game atmosphere, while the Blues take on the Boston.Admission Bruins are $20 to the general public or $10 for Blues Season Ticket Holders. Proceeds from ticket sales will benefit the Blues kids fund. Tickets can be purchased online using the link below and sold first come, first served. Tickets are mobile only for this event and seating is assigned. The doors will open at 5:30 p.m. for each game, and fans can expect: Full game production, including opening videos, goal celebrations, etc. Intermission games celebrity performances live music inflatable and lawn games Happy Hour specially priced food and drink items Game Date and time Purchase Mon. May 27 @ 7 am sold wed May 29 @ 7 sold out Thursday June 6 @ 7 am sold wed June 12 @ 7 pm sold events Upcoming from sports events concerts and family shows, Enterprise Center is your goal for great entertainment st Louis. See all events It's a safe bet when they play Gloria again. St. Louis Blues victory 5 of the Stanley Cup finals was held in the TD Garden, but the Enterprise Center was still full of cheering fans. KMOX radio in St. Louis shared a video of a jam-packed watch party as the final seconds marked a distant 1,200 miles from the Blues' 2-1 victory Thursday.Tweet from @KMOXSports: A call from @chriskerber, with an uplifting of @Enterprise_Cntr #STLBlues #StanleyCupFinal pic.twitter.com/Rx94Y7ifyMThe team shared their record of fans celebrating David Perron's third-period goal at Enterprise Center.Tweet from @StLouisBlues: Repeat: This is not a home game. #stlblues #WeAllBleedBlue pic.twitter.com/ffSUJwitspWhile it's true, Game 5 wasn't a home game, it's to be expected in the same raucous game 6 in St. Louis on Sunday. The Enterprise Center will host three more Stanley Cup finals clock parties for the first time on May 29, then June 6 and June 12. Samantha Stevenson may 28, 2019 at 10:00 AM on Monday night, Enterprise Center was a typical St. Louis Blues game scene. Fans-donning Tarasenko sweaters and blues out baseball caps swung towels and applauded as the goals were scored, all broadcast above the arena video board and celebrated with blue and yellow tier lights swirling through the auditorium. But there were no hockey players on the ice below. Conversely, the St. Louis Blues were more than 1,000 miles away playing the Boston Bruins in Boston. Still, St. Louis fans flocked to the Enterprise Center (1401 Clark), with just over 14,000 people filling stadium seats for sale from the event. But why come if you're not even going to see the team live? For some, it's a friend. Fans will be cheering on the team anyway, so may as well do the team's home rink with a couple thousand fellow die-hards. For others, the draw is part of the hockey stage. It's a story making, says Ryan Shey, 23, as to why he came to a watch party, as if not coming was even an opportunity. It's been 50 years since the St. Louis Blues were in the Stanley Cup final. Although the team lost Game 1 4-2, the Stanley Cup is the best of seven. The Enterprise Center will host three more Stanley Cup Finals watch parties for the first time on May 29 (which has also already sold out), then June 6 and June 12. Doors open at 5:30 p.m. Tickets are mobile only – $10 for the general public and $5 for Blues season ticket holders. May 28, 2019 at 10:00 AM Sign Up Current, St. Louis Magazine email review of the day's best stories. Or see all our newsletters. AP, ST. Louis (AP) - Tens of thousands of people are expected in downtown St. Louis for Game 7 of the Stanley Cup Finals, though the game itself is boston.The St. Louis Blues and Boston Bruins play a crucial game Wednesday night. Watch the party at Enterprise Center, home of the Blues, sold out within 10 minutes of tickets going on sale Monday.So baseball's Cardinals decided Stadium for the second watch party. The baseball team is out of town this week. The hockey game will be shown on the main scoreboard in the ballpark. The Cardinals game in Miami will be on the secondary scoreboard. The Corporate Center was also sold to watch parties in three previous out-of-town games in the series. Series.