Now for the hard part, I had a great looking unicorn horn but how do you attach a paper/foam cone to the toilet brush bristles? I tried using only hot glue and it didn't have enough surface to bond the two together. I knew I needed some kind of support structure. This is where the floral card holders come! The floral card holder has a 3-point fork on one end. I cut the center, leaving the outer pieces, and then I inserted this into the center of the toilet brush and proceeded to build a layer of hot glue around it. If you use hot glue too much too quickly it will take Long time to cool and harden. * Make sure to glue the cardholder in a lightly forward angle. The cone is not a hat but a horn and the angle should be a little forward.* I use my scissors to cut the length of the plastic card holder shorter than the length of the cone. It was easy to push hard plastic through the foam and slice the cone on the toilet brush. Once I had everything aligned I removed the cone, added hot glue, and put it back in place as I waited for the glue to harden. I added additional glue in the seams to enhance the cone. At this point he had begun to look like a papal! The cone was securely attached and could take some vibration without feeling lost. Lose.
