It is played on a square board made of 64 smaller squares, with eight squares on both sides. Each player starts with sixteen units: eight infantry, two knights, two bishops, two newcomers, one queen and one king. The object of the game is for each player to try and checkmate the king of the opponent. Checkmate is a threat (check) to the opposite king who does not move can not stop. It ends the game. During the game, two opponents take turns moving one of their pieces to the other square boards. One player (White) has pieces of light color; Another player (Black) has dark-colored pieces. There are rules about how units move, and about taking opponent's pieces off the board. A player with white cuts always makes the first step. For this reason, White has a small advantage, and wins more often than Black tournament games. Chess is popular and is often played in competitions called chess tournaments.
