Red white and blue flags with cross

light the sparkle and straighten up dessert. 1. No-Bake Cheesecake Flag Cake This bright and festive flagcake cheesecake will not heat up your kitchen when you do it with a creamy cheesecake mixture without baking on top of a graham cracker crust. Use blueberries for stars and strawberries for the stripes, and you have a lovely flag cake dessert. Watch the video to see chef John put it together. This wonderful red , white and blue flag cake starts with white cake mix to simplify things, so you can concentrate on creating the layers that make each piece their own flag. You should watch the video to see how it all stacks up — it's actually easier than you might think. Related: Get patriotic recipes for a very festive Fourth of July, Memorial Day, and Flag Day. Raising a teenager is tense and difficult, even under the best of circumstances. But these red flags require extra vigilance: Tattoos While the rapidly growing popularity of tattoos in the United States can make it easy for parents to dismiss them as a harmless fad, research published in a pediatric health journal reveals tattoos are a kind of shorthand that high-risk teens use. The study, which found that 10 to 16 percent of teens ages 12 to 18 have permanent tattoos (compared to between 3 and 9 percent of the general population), discovered a high correlation between tattoos and substance abuse, fighting at school, and crummy grades. Tattooed teens are four times as likely to have had sex as their tattoo-free peers. Friends you have not encountered reluctance to bring new friends over to the house should raise suspicion that drugs and alcohol are in the photo. Girls who develop early Not only are such girls more likely to be victims of bullying and sexual overtures, some research links early puberty in girls to alcohol use. Kids You've Caught Smoking When you've caught a child lighting up, it's a good bet that alcohol is next on the menu. Lock your booze. Girls you suspect are sexually active A Yale University study found that about half of sexually active girls aged 15 to 17 seriously underestimate the risk of unprotected sex. Girls between the ages of 15 and 19 are at highest risk for all groups for gender klamydia and gonorrhoea. So if you suspect that your daughter is lying with boys, make sure she understands the health risks, especially HIV, and how to prevent them.
