The first hybrid of wolf and German Shepherd was carried out by Leendert Saariaus in 1932, some studies prove that they existed in Teotihuacan many years ago. Wolf dogs life is from 12 to 14 years. This may seem like a dream dog combo, but what's the story behind this legendary wolf dog? Here's everything you need to know. What is a German Shepherd wolf mix? @diary_of_a_wolfdog The wolf is produced when a German Shepherd and a wolf breed together. It's hard to understand this combination completely without first looking at the background of parents' because it's impossible to predict how a hybrid will look or act as it ripens. There are no two wolves that are the same! German Shepherd: protective "highly intelligent German Shepherd" In 1899, Captain Max von Stefanitz raised the first German Shepherd Dog (GSD) in Germany. He strives to produce a flock of dogs, unsurpassed in mind, obedience and physical forging. Today, the German Shepherd is considered one of the most popular family and working dogs. Highly intelligent, fierce loyalty and easy to train, this dog is widely used for police and military work and as a guard dog. She has a reputation for being aggressive towards strangers as she is protected by her family. This can be tempered by early socialization and training. Wolf as in appearance with a long muzzle and pointed ears, German Shepherd is large with a medium to long, thick layer. Traditional GSD is tan and black in coloring or can be tightly white or black. Other Popular German Shepherd Mix due to its popularity as a family dog, several mixes have originated with a German Shepherd as a parent. Here are some other well-known crosses: Wolf: Straight Out of the Wolf Desert It's a wild animal. This means that domestication is not natural for the Wolf and does not come easily. It also means that a dog with a wolf gene cannot be expected to be predictable. Wolves are predatory creatures with strong hunting instincts. Other animals, especially smaller creatures, are seen as food, not friends. Wolves are shy around humans. There are two species of wolves that were bred with a German Shepherd. Saarlos Ulfund, it's a German shepherd's mix. It was established in 1935 by Lander Saariaus from the Netherlands. Saarloos is looking for a new hybrid with more natural features to form a healthy working dog. The result is not what he expected. Instead, Saarlos Wulfhund is cautious, reserved and lacking in ferocity. Despite its unfavorable characteristics as a working dog, the hybrid develops like a wolf like a wolf. It can reach up to 30 inches (76 cm) in height and weigh up to 40 lbs (45 kg). It has athletic construction with a dense layer of skin, which can be gray, red or white in color. Czechoslovak wolf Czechoslovak wolf This mix was created in 1955 in Czechoslovakia, when a German Shepherd was raised with the Carpathians. The idea is to create a mix with intelligence, training, and a package mentality of a German Shepherd, as well as the physical strength and endurance of the wolf. This Wolfdog was bred to be used as an attack dog for special forces, as well as rescue, tracking, herding, and hunting. In 1982 it was recognized as a national breed in Czechoslovakia and later by FCI in 1989. The Czechoslovak wolf dog can reach a height of 26 inches (65 cm) and weigh up to 57 lbs (26 kg). Its fur is short, straight and thick, coming in yellow-gray and gray-gray. Unlike the shy Saarlos, the Czechoslovak voldog is confident and adamant. He is also playful, temperamental and strongly protective of his family. It can be aggressive towards other dogs and pets. Early socialization is highly recommended to soften the dominant character. Other popular half-wolf half dog Mixes German Shepherd is not the only domesticated dog that has been raised with a wolf. Look at these wolves and dogs that look like wolves. What does the German Shepherd hybrid look like? German Shepherd looks like a wolf in appearance to start with, so you can count on the hybrid to be large, with a long face, a thick layer and pointed ears. The fur of the wolf can be gray, saber, white, black or a mixture of these colors. She will most likely inherit the thick skin, which is standard for both parents and is known to spill heavily. The average size of a German Shepherd Wolf is a weight of 120 lbs (54 kg) and a height of 60 cm. You can take a closer look at this Wolfcog mix in the video. Is wolf shepherd dangerous? When adding the genes of a wild animal to the pool, it is imperative to understand that this leads to a cross-cross, which is very unpredictable. The behavior of the German Shepherd Wolf is characterized by shy and frightening features. If a wolf is uncomfortable, it can attack from defense. This has earned them a reputation as dangerous and they are banned in several US states. Wolves build dens and roam often. They also have a strong package and predatory instincts. These traits become destructive behavior for Wolfdog, digging holes in the garden and chewing wooden furniture. They can also urinate more often than other breeds of dogs to mark their territory. I will go ahead and say immediately off the bat that this hybrid is not recommended for dog owners for the first time. It takes one who is passionate and ready to devote time and energy to a German shepherd wolf dog. Due to its unpredictable nature, it is advisable not to leave this cross alone other pets and especially children. Black German Shepherd Valcha mixes in particular, are known for being less tolerant of children. They were known to react by biting and shaking. This is a natural response to Black GSD when correcting the behavior of a puppy. It's not all bad. With rigorous training, Wolfdog makes a protective and loyal companion. They are strong, intelligent, playful and attached to the family. Are wolf german shepherd mix's health problems common? As mentioned above, the life expectancy of German Shepherd Wolf Mix is up to 14 or even 15. However, the German Shepherd breed is vulnerable to serious genetic diseases that can be transmitted to this particular Wolfdog hybrid. Hip dysplasia: Painful deformation of the hip joint, which causes loss of mobility and limping. Dysplasia of the elbow: Joint deformation that affects the elbows and can cause pain and loss of mobility. Swelling: Accumulation of gas in the stomach, which can lead to twisting and lead to shock or even death. Cancer: Abnormal cell growth that can spread throughout the body. Feeding time Since Wolfshepherd is prone to hip and elbow dysplasia, it is important to keep her on a strict diet to avoid obesity. Target 2 to 3 cups of meat-food for dogs, divided between meals every day. Remember that each dog has different health needs. If you are not sure how to feed your Wolfdog, consult a veterinarian for advice. Exercise time The German Shepherd Wolf hybrid needs daily activity to thwart destructive behavior and maintain its physical shape. The most suitable for this cross is a house with a large fenced yard. They need space to stretch their legs and roam. If you live in an apartment, you may want to consider a smaller breed of dog, or perhaps a dog that looks like a wolf. Not only is the apartment too small space, but this combination prefers to spend time outdoors, like its Wolf parent. Keep a few toys by hand to burn your dog's energy. The game brought with a ball or games with thumping can help to master this habit of chewing under control. Can you train Wolf Shepherd? Training is 100% essential if you decide to own a hybrid with a German Shepherd. This is the only way to mitigate the propensity for alienation, fear and unpredictable temperament. Training should begin at the puppy stage in order to be effective. Be prepared because Wolfdogs are not easy to train and require time, patience and consistency. Dominance is one of the main German shepherd wolf mix characteristics that you will need to focus on. As an owner, you have to be confident and claim to be the leader of the pack. If your attention falls apart Game time or your Wolfdog decides to ignore commands, stay positive, but still hard and above all - don't let them dominate you. Socialization is key to helping Wolfdog adopt other pets in the household. Walking around the park can help, but always keep 10000000000000000000 Monitor them when there are other dogs. Where can I buy a German Shepherd wolf mix? If this is the wild dog of your dreams (and you fully understand the level of responsibility that comes with owning Wolfdog), then expect to pay up to $800 for a German Shepherd Wolf puppy. When looking for reputable German shepherd wolf blend breeders, look for someone who is open to visiting and will provide health permits. They should be able to answer questions about parents, especially with regard to medical history. German Shepherd Wolf mix adoption and rescue Unfortunately, people buy Wolfdogs because of the appearance, underestimating the level of support required. This leads to a large number of them being left in rescue shelters. Here are 3 Wolfdog Rescues, where you can search for a German Shepherd mix along with other Wolfdogs. Woods Woods Un cry wolf rescue and adoption The Dark Forest Kennels is a German shepherd wolf hybrid for you? Without a doubt, it's a beautiful mix to watch. However, this is not a recommended cross-over for the first time dog owner. The wolf can be nervous, dominant and predatory. They should not be left alone around other pets and children. Strict training and socialization is required to help reduce anxiety around strangers and stop dominant behavior.
