Runs *** Infinitives Verbal: A verbal is a verb form that no longer acts like a verb. In other words, a verbal looks like a verb, but it has turned itself into a noun or an adjective. Verbals can be a formulated or they can be part of a sentence. There are three types of verbals: Participle (Phrase) VERB + ING, ED, ED, OR T ADJECTIVE Run (Phrase) VERB + ING NOUN Infinitive (Phrase) TO + VERB NOUN, ADJECTIVE, OR ADVERB ***Verbals are NO LONGER VERBS in a sentence. It is important that you identify the verb or verb phrase in a sentence so that you do not consider it a verbal.*** The Participle (Sentence) A Participle is a verb form that has turned itself into an adjective. It can do anything an adjective can do. It will describe nouns. The participle will usually hit the noun it describes (usually it is placed in front of the noun, but it can be placed behind the noun as well). Participles are verb forms that must end in one of these endings: ed, ing, and, or sometimes t (made can be a participal; note that it has no end) verb + end = participle (99% of the time) You remove a participle from the sentence. Participles - such as adjectives - are not necessary in a sentence. You DO NOT REMOVE A PARTICIPAL FROM A SENTENCE and do not harm the sentence. You don't do that with a verb as verbs are always necessary. EXAMPLES: 1. The rotting apple smelled really terrible. Rotten is the participle. (Rot + ing = rot). Rotten acts as an adjective because it describes the apple. 2. His spinning car sounds like it's dying! Running is the participle. (run + ing = running). Running acts as an adjective in that it describes the car. DYING is a verb in the above sentence. A sentence can have more than one participle, but that is rare.*** The participialzin A participialzin begins with a participle (verb + ING, ED, EN or T). To the participle will be attached preposition phrases, adjectives, adverbs, etc. The entire PARTICIPIAL PHRASE acts as a giant adjective in the sentence. Participial sentences are not necessary in a sentence. They are added by the writer as extra bling to make the phrase pop into the readers mind. Since they are not necessary, participatory sentences require that a COMMA or COMMA be used to distinguish them from the main sentence. There is no need to add a comma if the participial sentence ends the sentence. the commas to place when using participial phrases: Participial Phrase, ZIN Sentence begins, Participial Phrase, the rest of the sentence. Sentence Participial Phrase EXAMPLES: ***Eating like a wild game Mitchell's done everything for him. My best friend, crying on the moon, pretended to be a werewolf. Julian ate the pizza swim with lots of fat from the pepperoni. FIND THE PARTICIPLE (SENTENCE) The screaming baby kept us awake last night. Kneading the big ball of dough, the baker whistled as if he was having fun. My best friend, begging for another chance to win the prize, really needed the money. Other languages have incorporated this into their basic form of the infinitive. In English we use the two words: to plus a verb. An infinitive calls an action or state of being. It's good to skate. The words to skate form the infinitive verb used as a noun and can be used in different parts of speech: subject, object, etc. Knowing the infinitive form of a word in English is very useful when learning a second language, because many other languages use a suffix or an ending to indicate the infinitive verb as with French infinitives. It takes two words in English to form the infinitive: to + verb. For example: In English we have the word too for the verb as in to be, to do, to make. This is the root or basic shape of the verb. For example: The infinitive verb for am/are/is/was/ware is to be. It is also called the full infinitive or the infinitive sentence. What is a split infinitive? A split infinitive has an adverb between the word and the verb. The infinitive sentence is split by the adverb or another word. To go boldly... There is some controversy if one thinks by some that one should not split the infinitive. In some other languages this would be impossible because the adverb could not be included in the word; but because English is infinitive in two words, it is possible to add an adverb. My opinion? I think a split infinitive can add the emphasis or be more descriptive.
