In his first outing as host, Martin Freeman took Saturday Night Live to Middle Earth by way of the Office, as well as Fargo, N.J. in an amplified, where standard issue show that featured a Weekend Update segment that was mostly DOA, that terrific take on the office, dopey Fargo-drawn both about waterbeds and funny if way-too-long sketch called Sump'n Claus, in which anyone who naughty gets a cash reward from that other kind of Santa Played by Kenan Thompson. Check out the video clip above if you need a little sump'n too. As for the musical talent, Charli XCX, and there was neither music nor talent, although there were hot pants - but that's just my opinion. What's yours? White Santa (Bobby Moynihan) only gives gifts to good little boys and girls, but Sump'n Claus (Kenan Thompson) doesn't care if you're naughty or beautiful. Everybody's getting'n saying it while dividing money. Even Mrs. Claus (Aidy Bryant) prefers coal in her chimney. Sump'n Claus started out as one of Santa's assistants. He helped his wife and gave her some sump'n. SNL host Martin Freeman (Hobbit) plays a disgruntled employee who runs the post after being fired from his job. Sump'n Claus still pays him to visit. Even Freeman's bad dancing can stop the money train. Other bad celebrities getting sump'n include Justin Bieber, Paula Deen, Donald Sterling, Suge Knight and Kevin Bacon, who is just his homie explains Sump'n Claus. So it happened: Sump'n Claus is a Saturday Night Live sketch about an embarrassing elf who hands out envelopes of money to people on Santa's naughty list. The music sketch tells the story of how several people got on the naughty list, and gives a backstory for Sump'n Claus. It doesn't explain where the money comes from because, as Carter n Claus says: Where am I getting this money? Hey, man. We don't need to talk about it. Jay phroahPete DavidsonSump'n Claus ...
