#SongTranslatorChallengeI is going to translate one of my favorite songs (30 seconds to Mars's Kill), but they use such strange sentences and it's all abstract like all punk bands and their weird af lyrics lol. The single was released as a digital download on January 21, 2008, peaking with a lot of airplay in the summer months, on September 8, 2008 on billboard pop 100 cards[2] and No. 21 on billboard hotboard 100 cards. The song debuted at number 27 on the Australian ARIA Singles Charts and has since reached 19. The song was certified 2x Platinum in the United States by the RIAA. [3] The music video Music video was released a week after the single was released. The video was shown on MTV's TRL. It features John Vesely playing the piano and performing a song intercut with footage vesely with a woman. They seem to be happily in love until he seems to show some insecurity, making him think he doesn't love him when he really does. As a result, the fight breakouts between the two of them led her to want to leave. However, at the end of the video, she comes back to him. It seems that love/hate relationships, hedth is that the lyrics drop you again. Anonymous December 2nd 2011 report Intro makes it clear that the song is a guy telling his girl about his relationship with him and that they are always struggling. Could it be that we've been this way before? To me, as the guy says that, shows that he is a little sarcastic; i knew if they ever went at night without a fight. It also means it's been so long since they've had a good night, he can't believe there was a time when they did not come at all. I know you're wearing thin down to the core He knows she's coming to her tipping point with something he's doing. In the chorus he is clearly telling her to wait and see they will have good nights again (and again). There's an interesting part though that makes it clear he's in control of the relationship. When he says, Don't make me change my mind, it shows that he could go back to his words, and hints that maybe he's before. Then he says she's unlike anyone he's ever met. This whole section confirms my suspicions. He's probably cheated on him at least twice before. He didn't think it would happen, and he promised that he would n't do it again. She thought he was better than that, but he gave up. Although he succumbed, it was always her he wanted. The chorus, again, restates the ideas it had first been through. These are the last articles before the end of the choir. At first it seemed kind of detached from the rest of the song, but if you look closely it makes sense. He tells her to calm down and take what he says into account. And keep on your words, cuz talk is cheap This part might seem like he means she shouldn't talk, but I think as long as he says it to her, he has it for himself, he is for himself, he has it for himself, he is the same; that he will be holding on to his words, his promise, and that it doesn't matter what he tells her because the talk is cheap. He's still not going to cheat on him. The choir, for the last time, highlights the point it tried to get across
