For example: This is my brother. He's your friend. Possessive adjectives in Spanish have a unique and plural form, according to the thing one possesses. It is important to remember that the possessive adjectives we and vosotros have a feminine and masculine form. Note also that the possessive adjective formed by tú is tu, the same letters, but without the written pronunciation, so be careful not to confuse these words. For example, you're Mary and your sister is Joan. The first way is through possessive possessive the second using de(s) and the third, and perhaps the most popular way, is using Spanish possessive adjectives. In this grammar lesson, we will focus on providing examples of suggestions that express possession in Spanish with possessive adjectives and rules to use them appropriately. The Cemnmemos... What are Spanish possessive adjectives? Spanish possessive adjectives or Los adjetivos posesivosPare take a few minutes to watch something. They are words like MI (me), TU (yours) and so on, and can be used as follows: Ellos son mis padres (they are my parents). The following image summarizes their basic characteristics and how they should agree on number and gender with the noun they modify. Possessive adjectives - Los adjetivos posesivosPare take a few minutes to watch the video below on the rules for using possessive adjectives in Spanish to form sentences. The video includes a chart of these words and many examples to help you understand the rest of the lesson more easily. Placement of Spanish possessive adjectivesSpanish possessive adjectives are always placed before nouns or words, just as in English. Therefore, if we want to say His car is new, then we just need to find the appropriate possessive adjective (SU) and say Su carro es nuevo, where CARRO is the essential this person owns. Substantial-adjective agreement rules As their English counterpart, Spanish possessive adjectives must agree on the sex (male/female) and number (plural/single) with the noun they possess. Most of these words have unchanged sex, that is, they will remain the same regardless of the word they modify as MI in Mi carro and Mi amiga. Speaking of common goods, we will use Nuestro for male nouns such as Nuestro perro and Nuestra for female nouns such as Nuestra masquemaFor a unique noun like CARRO, we could use Spanish possessive adjectives in unique formats such as MI or SU, but not in plural form such as SUS or MIS, e.g. Mi carro and Turo. Following the same rule, a plural noun such as flores (flowers) would need a possensitive adjective in plural form, which are formed by adding the letter S at the end of the word in unique form, e.g. SU -> SUS, MI -> MIS; Mis flores, Sus flores ... and so on. A chart for possessive adjectives in SpanishSingularPluralMyMiMisYourTuTusHis, its, yourSusOurNuestro / NuestraNuestros / NuestrasYourSu/Vuestro / Vuestros / Vuestros / VuestrasTheirSuUsUsing Spanish possessive adjectives in Order to make suggestions with Spanish possessive adjectives, you just need to keep in mind rules on a substantive-adjective agreement and explained above. Imagine that you want to say her husband is an artist and my brother too. This sentence includes two possessive adjectives: adjectives: and MY. According to the diagram above, su corresponds to her and MI to ME, so we should say Su esposo es artista y mi hermano también. Remember that some Spanish possessive adjectives will change their end to -A or -O (nuestro ->g; nuestra) depending on the gender of the noun they modify, for example: Nuestra casa ... (our home) and Nuestro amigo (our friend). Know that Vuestro (a) will only be used in Spain, not in Latin America and instead we will use SU.
