Attic & Basement Storage Ideas to Gain More Space Again, my beautiful wife was the inspiration for this project. a corner bench in our dining room for lots of guests and handy storage space. As usual, I took come up with a design I considered safe enough for our house with little boys. Benjamin helps demonstrate my solution - lids descending with scissors-like edges in one plane with adjacent seats, lids and adjacent seats have a 45-degree bevel and a small gap. The eyelids also have spring supports that help reduce the risk of injured fingers. The sturdy structure of this bench is all plywood, so there is no need to build a frame inside. This leaves more space on the inside for storage. I'll point out one more thing-photos of the finished bench were taken after about 6 months of use as half the seating at our dining table. I like my wife's suggestion that more DIY articles should show how well the project will last after being in use for a while. I used my thumbs, so if your measuring tape is in cm, multiply my size to 2.54. Materials Plywood - I used 3/4 inch plywood with a sand veneer that is actually closer to 0.7 inches thick. Piano Curtains - longer than the lids so you can cut the length of the hard plate for the rear 1/4 inch MDF Bender board - I found it in my local home improvement store in the concrete section, sold to produce concrete molds. I used it for all my upholstery with very satisfactory results. Alternatively, you can cut your own from full sheets of MDF.
