If you are not able to answer your question, please feel free to contact us. - Yes, but you don't have to contact NOOOOOOO support. You're talking to a military romance. I received an email from the U.S. Army that answered your question directly. is placed below, please keep reading. I believe you're the victim of a military romance scam, while the person you're talking to is a foreigner posing as an American soldier who claims to be abroad on peacekeeping missions. That's the key to the deception they always claim to be on peacekeeping missions. Part of the scam tells them they don't have access to their money, that their mission is very dangerous. If your girlfriend/future husband/husband asks you to do the following or has exhibited this behavior, this is most likely a scam: Moved to a private messaging site as soon as I met you on Facebook or SnapChat or Instagram or some dating or social media site. Often times they delete the site they meet with them as soon as they ask you to move to a more private messaging siteProfessses love to you very quickly & amp; amp; seem to quote verses and lyrics, along with the use of their own kind of broken language, as they profess their love and devotion quickly. They also showed concern for your health and love for your family. You promise marriage as soon as you have to take a leave of absence that you've been asked to pay for. They ask for money (bank transfers) and Amazon, iTunes, verizon, etc. gift cards, for medicine, religious practices, and leave to return home, access the Internet, complete work tasks, help a sick friend, get him out of trouble, or anything that sounds fishy. The military provides all necessary soldiers, including medical care for food and transportation for departure. Trust me, I've been through this, he's probably going to cheat you. I'm trying to show you examples that you're probably on the contami. Below is a response to an email I received after I sent an inquiry to the U.S. government when I discovered I had been deceived. I got this wonderful response back with a lot of useful links on how to find and report your scammer. And how to learn more about Romanesque scams. Right now you can copy the pictures of the real person he pretends to be. it does not always work and dig. if you find the real person you can point them and warn them that their image is being used for fraud. Good luck, and I'm sorry this could happen to you. Please read the government's response, which I received below is very informative. You've reached an email that's being monitored by the commander of the military investigation. Unfortunately, it's a common concern. We assure you that there is never any reason to send money to someone who claims to be a soldier online. If you've only spoken to this person online, they're probably not an American soldier at all. If this is a profile of supposedly self-styled social media, we urge you to report a scammer on a Facebook account: Attention- ... &It; Attention- ... > ANSWERS TO FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS: - Soldiers and their loved ones are not charged money for the soldier to leave. - Soldiers are in this format: john.doe.mil@mail.mil &t; Attention-mailto: john.doe.mil@mail.mil > Everything ending in .us or .com is not an official email account. - Soldiers have medical insurance that pays for their medical expenses when treated in civilian health facilities around the world – family and friends do not have to pay their medical expenses. - Warplanes are not used for the carriage of private vehicles. - The military is not used to help soldiers buy or sell items of any kind. - Soldiers stationed in combat zones do not need to demand money from the public to feed or protect themselves or their troops. - Deployed soldiers do not find large unclaimed amounts of money from the country. Anyone who tells you one of the conditions/circumstances listed is true that they present as a soldier and try to steal money from you. We would invite you to immediately cease all contact with this individual.
