Anker keyboard for ipad air

The Anker TC930 isn't the only cheap accessory for the iPad keyboard: I found the TC950 on Amazon, which is a full folio case with a detachable keyboard for the same price. I prefer this all-in-one slim keyboard design, but you can feel differently. The TC930 is charged via Micro-USB and has a small switch on the side. The keys are configured in approximately the same size and layout as other keyboards, such as Logitech, too. Its numeric keys will double as iOS-specific keyboard shortcuts if you simultaneously press Fn. Sarah Tew /CNET But the downside of the TC930 is - no surprise - keyboard quality. Keys feel klackier and cheaper than my favorite belkin or logitech cases. And I found that I had a lot of recurring characters when I wrote quickly, which forced me to back off. It's an average typing experience, and after all, don't you buy one of these keyboards as a way to write more easily on your iPad? In need, for $30, this Anker Ultra-Thin isn't as bad as a basic travel keyboard, especially if you use it to write emails vs. novels. But for serious typers, this is not the keyboard you are looking for. eBay item number:183266961305 The seller assumes all responsibility for this list.
