Knight's purchase on BN.com Knight is the first in the General Prologue and tells the story first? Knight should first be described in the General Prologue, because it is the highest on the social scale, since it is closest to belonging to the highest estate, the aristocracy. The Knight knight derives from the court and Christian values he has sworn to respect: truth, honor, freedom and courtesy. The knighthood is in the first place because he drew the shortest straw of the group, even though the narrator thinks that the knight drew the shortest straw [were] in revenge, or variety, or time [by accident, happiness or fate] suggests that he does not think it was a coincidence that the knight first tells his story (General Prologue, 844). Why is the pardon so insulting? The pardoner is the most of all the pilgrims for four reasons: his work, his sin (greed), his unrepented pride and sexuality. The pardon work – giving to people who were untied from sin – was a dubious profession in medieval Europe. As he reveals in his Prologue, pardoner is well aware that he's a boozier himself, which is a sin he preaches against to convince people to give him money. What makes him so distasteful to other characters, especially the host, is the fact that he is so proud of his vice. In General Prologue, the narrator suggests that the pardoned sexual orientation is uneasy, which means that it occupies an even marginalised position in the society of the fourteenth century. 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, HomeschoolPage 20h no!
