It was originally premiered on ABC and was released on DVD and VHS in the same year. The film follows a young girl whose doll Eva (somewhat like Barbie) becomes a living woman. It was filmed in 1999 as part of Disney's Sensitive World on ABC in March 2000. It's a raffle that's a seventh-grade quarterback. Since her mother died, she has avoided her old friends and argued with a boy on her team. Wanting to bring her mother back to life, Casey found a book called The Book of Awakening in a local bookstore. The book contains a section on the resurrection of the dead, and a successful resurrection will become permanent unless it is canceled before sunset on the fourth day after its beginning. However, since the book was expensive, she left all the money she had on the shelf in a glass compartment where the book was. Following the book's instructions, Casey collects artifacts from her mother's life, including strands of hair in her hairbrush. However, the resurrection was unwittingly sabotaged when Drew Mitchell, a woman who worked with and was romantically interested in Casey's father Ben, gave Casey a doll for Eva. Eve is a plastic doll in the form of a beautiful young woman, produced by Marathon Toys. She has many accessories, including outfits suitable for challenging careers such as law enforcement, medicine and space, and lives in Sunnyvall, in mid-America. As Casey prepares to resurrect her mother, Drew stops by to give her her birthday doll and uses to comb the doll's hair. With strands of the doll left on the brush as Casey pronounces the spell, the magic acts on the doll, not Casey's mother, and Casey wakes up the next morning to find Eva in bed with her in full human form. Casey's upset about it, but Eva's excited about being human. Over the next few days, Ive bought clothes at the local shopping mall, used his police training to stop a truck that nearly ran Casey, smelled and ate for the first time, tried and failed to do a jet-setting job, sang his theme song on stage during a dance with Ben, and nearly set Stewart's kitchen on fire. She also helped Casey cope with the loss of her mother. Meanwhile, Casey discovers that she needs the second volume of the magic book to reverse Eve's spell. Meanwhile, tensions build up between Casey and her father, who missed his football games while trying to secure a promotion to his law firm. The tension is further heightened by Ben's attraction to Eve, which Casey doesn't overcharge as a betrayal of his mother. Eva helps people become a better version of themselves. With the proceeds of the film, Casey and Eva gradually became friends. Eva shows insight and sensitivity in conversations with Casey about her mother, and she helps Casey with her self-esteem. In return, Casey gives Eva advice on how to be a popular doll and a good role model. By the time the magic book arrived at the local bookstore, Casey decided she liked Eva, so she didn't buy it. Unfortunately, Ive had a very nostalgic time. Frustrated by her difficulties in being human and worried about being terminated by marathon, Eva decides to break the spell herself. After buying the book and saying goodbye to Ben from Casey's game, she went to Sunnyvale, a specially decorated room in the marathon headquarters, and recited the spell. When Casey and Ben arrive, she tearfully says goodbye to them and turns into a doll. Later, with the lessons learned from her experiences in the human world, she again became a popular toy. Casey renews his old friendships, Ben is promoted to work, and Drew takes him to lunch. The film ends with Eva's acting, with an apparently still human Eva singing and dancing, Tyra Banks as Eva Lindsay Lohan as Casey Stewart Jere Burns as Ben Stewart Anne Marie Lauder as Drew McDonald Garvin Garvin as Richie Tom Butler as Phil Gillian Fargay as Ellen Dee Jackson as Coach Kerry Sandomierz as Phyllis Weiner Corone Coslo as Toady's shop owner Alfred Humphrey as bookstore owner Kerry Gilfriris. Lohan shouldn't have auditioned for the role of Casey Stewart, the girl whose doll comes to life. The film's producers offered her the role as part of a three-year contract with Walt Disney. [1] Banks was given the role of Eva, the doll who magically became a living woman during Casey's attempt to bring her mother back to life. Costume designer Maya Mani said: 'It was a pleasure working with Tyra because she knows how to wear clothes. No matter what we wear, she could wear it. [2] The filming of Stephanie Moore came up with the idea of a doll coming to life. She collaborated with director Mark Rossman on the telegram for the film. Pre-production began in the summer of 1999, and filming began in October 1999. The film begins with an ad promoting eve's doll purchase. For the doll's commercial, production designer David Fisher deliberately went for a 1950s vintage look similar to the Jetsons. It was supposed to look date-set, but fun and appealing, Rosman said. The shooting took place for three weeks. For the location, producers think Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada will be a good place for the film. The toy store used in the film is called Cabodets. This is the real name of the toy store, as it was not changed during production. It is located in Point Grey in Vancouver. There are British Columbia flags on Ben's license plate, indicating that it is located in British Columbia Canada. However, also on the license plate, it says: Evergreen State. Evergreen State is Washington. The film originally premiered as part of Disney's Sensitive World on February 27, 2000. He was delayed by a week and later released on March 5. Music George Blonديهeim and Mark Rossman wrote a song called Buddy star, which Tyra Banks sang at a business party. The song is the song for the film and is repressed at the end of the film. The film used two songs by the band B*Witched: C'est la Vie and Carousel. A song from Pazy's debut album was used for the rest of the film. Sequel main article: Life-Size 2 A sequel to the film was first reported in November 2012.
