This is a notice the CA Franchise Tax Council sends when they believe an individual/business in the state of CA can live/operate but does not have a CA tax. CA Franchise Tax Board (FTB) is seeking the missing returns or verification that these individuals have no tax filing requirements. Why did I receive a CA Question for Taxation? The reason you can receive CA demand for tax may vary. From our experience, the most likely reason you can get this notice is when using your VPM mailbox to submit your 1040 federal taxes to the IRS. Owning a mailbox address or receiving mail in the state CA is not enough of a reason to pay state taxes. If you haven't set foot in the state of CA for more than 6 months (Safe Harbor Rule) or generate no income in the state of CA, you can safely assume you don't have to pay any CA state taxes. Of course, it's important that you consult with your CPA or tax advisor to obtain accurate answers. What should I do if I receive one? Once you receive this letter, you usually have 30 days to file a CA state tax return or prove you do not qualify for CA state taxes. If you do not respond to this letter, CA will assume that you owe taxes and will calculate your taxes based on your IRS federal tax return. Should I respond to the letter? Yes! If you ever receive this letter, don't ignore it. You must respond to it or the state CA will simply submit your taxes based on your federal tax information. For additional information about this form, once you've received it, you can plug in your information on the CA FTB website and even get an extension if you notify it soon enough. If you need to respond to the letter ASAP, you can always have these items scanned so that you can print out the PDF and fill them out. Once you fill them out, you can email us the forms and we can post them on your behalf. Another alternative is to create an account online on the California FTB website and then respond to the letter online. How can I prevent myself from getting this notice? So far, the best way we know is to prevent yourself from getting a demand for tax notice from the state of CA, not to submit your IRS 1040 taxes using your VPM mailbox address. Instead, use an address that is in your original state, use your CPA's address, or use your business-registered agent address. Most registered agents will accept mails and send you that post. The California Franchise Tax Board (FTB) raises personal income taxes and corporate taxes because of the state. When you pay your state taxes, you pay them through the California FTB. One of the most common questions we have of our customers in cities like Beach, Irvine and Santa Ana get to do with payments to the FTB. Our customers have submitted their tax returns and paid their taxes, but they find they still owe money. In this post we will find the possible possible Why. Why do I still owe money? There are a number of reasons why you can receive an account from the California FTB. You've filed your tax returns late. This is by far the most common reason you still owe money. People don't realize that late filing, even for one day, will incur a late filing bid. Late submission will cost you a 5% penalty plus 1/2 of 1% for each month the unpaid tax is not paid. The minimum penalty is $100. The obvious answer is to make sure you submit your taxes and pay the amount due before the deadline. You made a mistake. Another common issue we see at our Orange County tax law offices involves mistakes that tax files make when preparing their returns. They either demand an improper deduction or make a mistake in the math and consequently underpay the taxes they owe. The Franchise Tax Council will review your return and make corrections and then bill you the difference. Again, you may be subject to a late filing fine. You've underpaid your taxes. Sometimes unforeseen circumstances happen and taxpayers simply cannot pay the entire amount due. Our Orange County tax attorneys see this scenario every day. If you still owe taxes, you'll be subject to late filing fines that will grow every month. Your best bet in this scenario is to work out a payment plan to pay off the taxes due, interest and penalties. Personal Assessment for Business Taxes. If you own a business, you can be held personally responsible for your business' tax debt. For example, sometimes business officials receive exorbitant funds or other assets of a business, preventing it from paying its tax debts. When that happens, the officers can become personally liable for the tax debt. But wait - I owe no tax. Why am I still billed? In addition to collecting income taxes, the Franchise Tax Council is also collecting fees and penalties for other agencies. Your taxes can be paid, but you can have outstanding fees elsewhere. Back Child Support. By far the most common collection by the California FTB involves back childhood support. If you don't make court-ordered child support payments, the Franchise Tax Council will collect what's due and distribute it back to the person it's owed to. It's important to note that the FTB will use the same enforcement actions with child support that it does with tax debt and that means it can include everything from liens, wage-servant and seizing personal and property. Automatic Registration Fees. Where you paid your car registration late or you didn't register your vehicle? If so, a fine is added and fees can be collected by the Franchise Tax Council. In general, the FTB will begin introducing actions 90 days after the delinquency and that could include bank charges and wage bruises. Court costs. If you owe money for unpaid tickets or penalties, the Franchise Tax Board of Van those fees plus any late fees and delinquencies. Again, this may include involuntary actions such as wage bruise or bank charges. What do I do? If you received a collection notice from the Franchise Tax Council or a charge notice by your employer or bank, the worst thing you can do is ignore it. It won't go away. It is important to deal with the matter before it gets worse. Our Orange County tax attorneys can help you sort through the collection process and determine what should be the best course of action. Not every case is the same, but if it turns out you owe money, we can help stop collection actions. Other options include drafting an installment agreement and perhaps offering in compromise to settle the amount owed for less than what is due. Every case is different and there are no guaranteed outcomes, but our experienced tax lawyers can help you through the process. If the Franchise Tax Council says you owe money, but you're not sure why, contact the RJS LAW tax team or call (619) 595-1655 today for a no-obligation 1/2 hour consultation to discuss your options. In California, the state equivalent to the IRS is the Franchise Tax Council (FTB), which collects and reviews California tax returns for businesses and individual taxpayers. Like the IRS, the FTB regularly conducts audits to ensure businesses and individuals report their income, pay their tax debts and comply with other state tax laws under the California Revenue and Tax Code (RTC). And, like the results of an IRS audit, the results of an FTB audit can be challenged, or appealed by taxpayers who disagree with FTB findings. The question is, how does a California taxpayer start this process? In this article, our California tax lawyers will help you understand basics about the rules and procedures for challenging (protesting) an FTB decision by the Office of Tax Appeal (OTA). Have you received a notice of proposed assessment (NPA) from the Franchise Tax Council (FTB)? You can read this article because you A notice of Proposed Assessment (NPA) of the FTB has received informing you of unresolved tax obligations. There are two versions of versions The NPA: FTB Form 7275 (Personal Income Tax Notice of Proposed Assessment Information), which is for individualFTB form 5830C (Business Entity – Notice of Proposed Assessment Information), which for businessesAs FTB Form 7275 states, informs the Notice of Proposed Assessment (NPA) that we intend to pay additional taxes and/or penalties. You have the right to protest the NPA, which must be submitted within 60 days of the NPA date or to be submitted by the Protest by date. That reflects the provisions of California Revenue and Tax Code § 19041(a), which stipulates. Within 60 days of the post of each notice of proposed deficit assessment, the taxpayer at the Franchise Tax Council could put a written protest against the proposed deficit assessment, with socrenity in protest of the grounds on which it is based. If you received an NPA from the Franchise Tax Council, don't panic. As state law offers, you have the opportunity to appeal, or protest, the FTB's findings. If your protest is successful, you might not have to pay the additional tax debt or tax fines that the FTB would otherwise assess against you. As the FTB explains in FTB Notice 2018-01, each protest will be assigned to an FTB official called an audience officer for review. This hearing officer may represent the FTB's Legal Department or its Audit Division, depending on the situation. If the protest is addressed to a hearing officer in the Legal Division, it will be referred to as a dosed protest. Because the FTB has recently changed its internal procedures for processing Legal Division (dosed) protests, taxpayers would be wise to reacquate themselves with the updated regulations, which are discussed at length in FTB Notice 2018-01. Our Irvine tax lawyers will discuss these procedures momentarily, but first give a brief overview of how to protest a proposed FTB assessment. How to protest a proposed FTB Assessment Online or in WritingYou can make your protest online, by email or by fax. Needless to say, filing online ensures faster delivery with no risk of lost mail. You can make a protest online by following these instructions: Navigate to the FTB website. If you already have an account, sign in. If not, you must register as a new user. Once you've created or signed in your account, click the Account link. Click on the Suggested Assessments link. Select the correct NPA number and follow the directions to complete the online submission process. If you file a written protest, which can be either mailed or faxed, make sure the protest includes all of the following information. Failure to include the following can cause processing delays that affect your Complicate: Your contact information Contact Information for the person handling the protestYour TIN or SSNThe amount in question The tax year in questionA declaration of facts (a (a) a) of your argument), which must be supported by evidence, laws and factual information That you agree with any detail or aspect of the proposed assessment flavour signature (or that of your attorney)Finally, keep in mind the following points: Whatever method you choose, you must submit the protest within 60 days of the date specified on your NPA. Filing a protest would not prevent interest from accumulating, which can only be achieved by making a payment to the FTB. However, before you issue a payment to the FTB, you need to discuss your tax liabilities with an expert Los Angeles tax attorney. You have the option to have a representative handle your documentation for you. It is highly advisable to hire a tax call for FTB audit representation. In addition to managing deadlines and paperwork, your tax attorney will also ensure that your rights are not violated, and will work to minify any financial penalties. Appeals will be directed to the California Office of Tax Appeals (OTA), which was created last year. Processing FTB Dissed Protests Removal to the issue of changes to the processing procedures for dosed protests (protests referred to the Legal Department), here are some highlights of which taxpayers should be aware: According to FTB Notice 2018-01, The goal will be for staff to make contact with the taxpayer or the taxpayer's representative within 120 days, or less, of filing the protest, which means you should expect to hear from the FTB within four months of your submission. The contact described above will contain a request to determine an agreed trial date if a hearing has been requested, and may contain a request for additional documents or information. What matters is that we raise emphasis, issues that have not been raised by the taxpayer... in writing within the 60-day protest restriction period will usually not be considered unless these issues can be considered and resolved within the above-mentioned timeframe for the processing of dosed protests. After the protest hearing (where applicable), the taxpayers or taxpayer representatives must usually lodge an appeal with the Office of Tax Appeals (OTA). No appeal may be lodged until the FTB issues a Notice of Action.
