Information about driving with an international driver's license (IDP) A driver's license is such a common form of identity that it is a great target for identity thieves. To discourage fraud, New Jersey requires anyone applying for a driver's license to prove their identity. Possible identification documents deserve a certain number of points under the terms of the State Code. They range in value from one to four points, and you can't use more than two single-point documents. You have to score at least six points to get your license. You must provide an identification element from the state's main list of documents. Primary documents range from two to four points in value. Four document points include: U.S. birth certificate Current or expired less than three years U.S. Passport Current driver's license New Jersey Current New Jersey non-driving identity card certificate U.S. Citizenship Certificate Naturalization U.S. Adoption Documents Valid Active Duty U.S. Military Photo ID Current NJ Digital Boat License Foreign Passport with Immigration or Customs Verification Refugee Travel Document. The New Jersey Department of Motor Vehicles no longer accepts Puerto Rican birth certificates issued before July 1, 2010. You can contact the Government of Puerto Rico to get an updated birth certificate if you were born there. You can present an employment authorization card that includes your photo for three points. A foreign registration card or temporary registration card counts for two points. Photocopies of these documents are not acceptable. You must provide the original document or a certified copy. New Jersey also requires you to display a document from the sub-list. These documents range from one to three points in price. The three-point list includes: Marriage certificate or equivalent document Valid Divorce Decree Valid New Jersey gun buyer card USA military photo retired card Court order for a legal name change signed by judge or court clerk Two-point documents include: Valid United States School or college photo ID with transcript or school records FAA U.S. pilot's license discharge documents Valid government employee photo ID Valid government employee driver's license Some documents are worth one point each. You can use up to two of these documents to provide your six identity points. These documents include: Social Security Card Valid driver's license out of state Health Insurance License Card bank statement State business license NJ Social Service Identity Card Property tax return issued issued a NJ Municipality High School diploma or GED Veterans Affairs universal access photo ID ATM card with the applicant's full name and signature College diploma As with the main documents you provide, these must be all original documents or certified copies, not photocopies. You must provide the Motor Vehicles Commission with your social security number. MVC will compare your number, name, and date of birth with the records in the Social Security Administration database. You must also provide at least one document that displays your current address. This can be a copy of your high school, a real estate tax bill, a lease agreement, a recent utility bill or a recent bank statement. The document showing your address is not counted for your six points. It's extra. The state Motor Vehicle Commission recommends that you collect all your papers before you go to apply. Documents must be either original or certified copies. You should contact the relevant state or federal agency if you do not have a certified copy in hand. Some documents also require a state or municipal stamp to prove their authenticity. If your name has been changed from one to any of the documents that qualify you due to marriage or divorce, bring proof of the legal name change as well.
