Hallmark movie last christmas in vermont cast

Page 2 of the Last Vermont Christmas Rewatched November 29, 2019 Aside from the unflattering haircut of the male lead, nothing particularly stands out in this film. Not an unlikely plot (which parent would sell their home while one of their daughters still lives there?), not a half-hearted novel (but, hey, a single mother always gets a guy, that's the rule), nor a long list of obligatory Christmas events (nothing says Christmas like hanging wire at the Eiffel Tower, presumably) this family goes between predictable plot twists. Share Facebook Pinterest Twitter Email Share Facebook Pinterest Twitter Email Originally from a small town in Nebraska, with a population of 85 people, Justin Bruening graduated from high school with the other nine members of his class. After graduating from university, Bruening moved to San Diego and was discovered at a local McDonald's by a modeling agent. This was followed by his first modeling work in the Abercrombie and Fitch campaign, shot by renowned photographer Bruce Weber. Shortly thereafter, he began studying acting and was spotted as casting director at All My Children. He joined the cast in July 2003, playing the contract role of Jamie Martin. While working on ABC's All My Kids, Bruening made several guest television appearances and gave an unforgettable performance at the Favorite Fat Girls Festival. He has also been featured as one of the hottest daytime stars in Teen People, Us Weekly, Star, and J-14 magazines. Just two months after leaving All My Children, Bruening landed the coveted lead role in NBC's Knight Rider remake. He also tapped to breathe new life into Steve Trevor's iconic character in David E. Kelly's Wonder Woman reboot for NBC. He has also made numerous television appearances, including recurring roles on ABC's Grey's Anatomy, ABC's Family Switched at Birth, and CW's Ringer. Bruening has also starred in various TV films including hallmark Channel's Original Film Class and Lifetime's March sisters for Christmas and Blue-Eyed Butcher. Bruening and his actress wife Alexa Havin currently live in the Los Angeles suburbs with their children. Hallmark's nine-night Thanksgiving movie event continues Monday night with the premiere of Last Vermont Christmas. Erin Cahill and Justin Bruening star in the new holiday movie, which will air on Hallmark Movies and Mysteries. Although it's only been a couple of years since Cahill's last Hallmark movie, which was 2016 in Sleigh Bells Ring, it's been five years since Bruening was the last in the Hallmark flick, which was 2013's Thanksgiving House. Now, they are making their comeback during the most popular season - Christmas movie season. Widowed mom Megan (Cahill) and her sisters Bethany (Rachel Rhodes-Devi) and Audrey (Katherine Corcoran) return to the house parents in Vermont for holidays, holidays, Starts. Soon after Megan comes home, she encounters her high school boyfriend, Nash (Bruening) and feels an old familiar spark. Audrey later admits to Megan that she has been living at home for the past few months, dropping out of a music school in Nashville. Photo: Courtesy of Mar Vista Entertainment When Megan's parents reveal they are selling the house, she is in shock. But the shock only multiplies when she learns that Nash and his business partner are planning to buy a house as an investment. While it surprises Megan, it's her sister Audrey who isn't really happy about it all, and she goes with her neighbor Brandon (Alan Pontes) to stop the sale going on. As the home buying process goes on, Megan and her family are trying to make their last Christmas in the home the best one ever, checking with their favorite Christmas traditions, the synopsis continues. Nash, who stops to oversee a (catastrophic) home inspection, stays to decorate cookies and sing Christmas carols and then joins the family in finding the Christmas tree. He begins to doubt the purchase of the house, knowing how much it means to Megan. As Megan and Nash reconnect over the festivities, she begins to wonder if she really should leave after Christmas, or if she should make her homecoming permanent. The Last Vermont Christmas airs at Hallmark Films and Mysteries on Monday at 9 .m. EST. 2 nominations.
