It's not just our leaves that are green. Garden by the Sea installed more than 70 solar panels on the roof for power and hot water. Any surplus energy generated and unused is transferred back to the island's utilities. We also catch rainwater from the roof, store it in a tanker underground, use a three-stage ultraviolet purification system and use it for bathing and drinking. These are just a few of the things we do to make sure we maintain our lush and beautiful environmentally conscious as possible! Since it has only three rooms, owners John and Nancy are able to offer a personal, attentive service to all guests and serve some of the most delicious breakfasts on the island. Each room is individually decorated, but each room is individually decorated in a cosy style with mosaics, mosquito nets and outdoor showers. In addition to the free breakfast, guests of the Garden by the Sea can use the beach loungers, towels, refrigerators and snorkeling equipment free of charge. There is no swimming pool or beach, not uncommon for small hotels in St. John. Guests are kindly requested to save water and electricity during their stay, which may not appeal to everyone Those looking for similar, cheaper accommodation should check out nearby Treetops. See more Bottom Line Rises over lush gardens, Garden by the Sea B& amp; B feels like a treehouse in the tropics. Mint green house with purple and white finish, Garden by the owners of the hotel Nancy and John, or managers Mickey and Frank - depending on the season. The veranda serves as a lobby, breakfast room and bird reserve, and guests can relax throughout the day. Right next to the veranda there is a shared living space of the hotel. Decorated with mosaic floors, a different color on each wall and dozens of photographs, works of art and tchotchkes on every available surface, it's total kitsch that somehow works. The shared space includes a small seating area with wicker furniture and plenty of St. John guides, as well as a kitchen where guests can store cold drinks or prepare snacks and simple meals. Guests of Garden by the Sea are almost exclusively couples - from newlyweds to pensioners. Most of them are Americans, but each year sees smattering European visitors as well. It should be noted that Nancy and John keep their little dog, Winnie, on the property. See more Scene Though it's not quite in the heart of downtown Cruz Bay, Garden by the Sea is still a 10- to 15-minute walk to all the shops, bars and restaurants. Walking time and distance is greatly reduced thanks to the small intersection path, which allows guests to pass through private property. This route is really suitable only for people in decent physical condition, because the walk is quite hilly. Not suitable for people with luggage. Frank Bay, a small rocky beach, is about a 2-minute walk away. All beaches in the national park can be reached by taxi or rental car.
