Alpha Epsilon Pi ended its partnership with UCF but said it would continue to be the Alpha Epsilon Pi Delta chapter of Central Florida with support from national organizations. The brothers sent a letter to UCF Thursday citing the office's compliance of policies and procedures as a reason for the unlinking. Photo By Megan Turner Alpha of UCF Epsilon Fraternity Pi withdrew the university affiliation - citing unfair student conduct processes - but said the fraternity would continue its mission with the support of its national organization, according to a letter the fraternity sent to the university on Thursday. The brothers are now under an interim suspension stemming from an anonymous incident report made in February, a UCF spokesman said in an email Thursday. The report alleges several incidents of hazing, alcohol and drug use, threatening behavior and unverified incidents. Alpha Epsilon International's president Pi Jon Pierce said the organization lacked confidence in UCF's ability to handle cases of such actions. Alpha Epsilon Pi International is not convinced in ucf students conducting programs and management of these types of cases. We believe in using this situation as a teaching moment, not just a punitive opportunity, Pierce said. I'm not going to do it. He We support our chapters and will work closely with them to ensure that they follow our health and safety guidelines and work to fulfill our mission to develop future leaders of the world's Jewish community. The brothers said in a letter sent to UCF that it aims to continue the off-campus chapter with the support of national organizations. We just don't feel that Greek organizations are treated with fairness or fairness in considering administrative procedures by UCF's Office of Student Conduct and therefore we have terminated our official cooperation with UCF. Alpha Epsilon Pi read the letter. In January, the Office of Student Misconduct found UCF's Sigma Chi Fraternity in violation of harassment and alcohol-related misconduct and attempted to evict the fraternity from its privately owned home on campus. Sigma Chi appealed on the grounds of the conviction, which was reinforced, violated and awarded in March. Here's what we know: Preliminary allegations were made on February 27, and Knight News reported the incident on March 3 - just five days after it was reported to UCF the memo was not given to Knight News until the fraternity announced it was cutting ties with the university - Knight News was briefed on Thursday. In a summary of Epsilon Pi's alpha-alpha-pi investigation - written by the office of a student assistant, Shannon's conduct and a fraternity letter sent to the university, was Only records produced on Thursday - a screenshot of a note obtained by Knight News - a document courtesy of UCF outlining the investigation outlining photos, videos and timelines of the events - were included in an incident report sent to the university in February. It was not immediately known if the student's office had contacted or planned to contact the person who reported the allegations at the university. An anonymous person wrote in an initial report that he was a member of the fraternity and maintained his identity hidden for his personal safety. Screenshot of a note obtained by Knight News - a document courtesy of UCF Some Activities that pledges are being made during the new member's study process: drinking bong water, drinking several shots of vinegar, intensifying a random amount of food, some being assaulted by siblings, forced to pledge to eat alcohol, pledge blind food and throw a variety of substances and food with them for several hours, and make carriers carry carrying pornography-filled and from meetings. The thirty-one-authored survey was first completed by a new member of the organization to begin an investigation into allegations against the brothers, state documents, screenshots of notes obtained by Knight News - documents courtesy of UCF survey results do not support the information shared in the event report, which leads to further investigations by interviewing some members and the fraternity's pledges. Shannon concluded the investigation - written by Shannon in preparation for the Office of Student Conduct Director Michael Gilmer - documented interviews Shannon conducted with 17 individuals from the fraternity - Said in a summary of the investigation that the case should move forward for a formal investigation based on the information gathered. He called for advance evidence that the hazing incidents but listed more than 20 charges for the fraternity to face and protect themselves from a hearing in June. It depends on the criteria. It is more likely than not that the facts or violations of the rules of conduct do not occur according to the golden rules of the student manual. A screenshot of a memo obtained by Knight News - a document courtesy of the UCF Foundation for Individual Rights in Education - a nonprofit organization dedicated to protecting and preserving the rights of individuals on college campuses across the country. - Call on universities to keep the promise of due process among students Zach Greenberg, an attorney with The Fire's Privacy Protection Program, said he did not. All details were provided to comment on this case, but Fire said it had helped cases involving student organizations and due process violations across the country. We see a group of students, many of the political persuasions, all perspectives, shapes and sizes - including brothers and sisters and other Greek organizations - getting paid under their student code, and many times they are punished without the opportunity to be heard and without hearing or semblance any of the due process. Greenberg said the cost notice and the opportunity to be heard by a neutral adviser or panel are just a few elements of basic basic steps. It is a fairly common basic principle that these groups of students assumed to be innocent until proven guilty, and they must be given the opportunity to defend themselves before being punished by the Greenberg School. We strongly encourage universities to do the right thing by these groups and support the process by paying these groups a fundamental step of fairness. A UCF spokesman said that while the Greek system benefits many students, the community cannot tolerate allegations of misconduct or acts that harm our campus community. This is a development story.
