She's about to willingly marry a rich suitor when she meets a romantic rasta singer, Lee de Leon, who is lined up at the last minute to perform at her engagement party. There are sparks, of course, but Anita refuses to acknowledge them, instead focusing on playing matchmaker to a constantly bickering, secret-in-love couple: her sarcastic cousin Poorvi and her under-performing future brother-in-law, Partiv. Of course, no one can see that these sworn enemies are made for each other... No one but Lee vows to unite the two. Anita is skeptical that Lee, the newly arrived stranger, can pull off an achievement she has been trying to achieve for years. When he manages to turn the fighters into love birds by a little creative Cupidry, however, Anita's moved by his romantic gifts and decides she wants to be with him, just once, before she enters into a loveless marriage for the sake of her father's future.
