Simon Sinek is the author of this impressive book. This is a fantastic eye-opening book for managers and leaders. The book is written with a corporate inclination, but the reason you should read is that between the lines you will find inspiration to remember why the child that was you, dreamed about adulthood. It will inspire you to figure out why you are alive and going to work every day and start each task with an understanding of why you are doing this task. Success in the business world is almost magical. You can gob money and a lot of talent and still be bankrupt in a year. History is riddled with huge companies failing while small startups become huge successes. Through his book, Sinek shows us a success: Apple, Microsoft, Southwest Airlines, Wal-Mart and others. He explains that these successes were built around the great people who inspired others: Steve Jobs, Bill Gates, Herb Kelleher, Sam Walton, etc. These people may not be great at business, in fact, some didn't know how to put together a business plan, but they understood what was most important to them. Once some of these people left their position, their business immediately began to collapse, mainly because the company and its leader had forgotten their central purpose. Whether you are leading a corporation or only you, you must start with your own personal way and this book will help you see why and must be done.
