American Counseling Association As the world's largest association representing professional counselors in a variety of practice settings, the American Counseling Association is ready to serve more than 56,000 members with the resources they need to make a difference. From webinars, publications and journals to Conference education sessions and legislative action warnings, the ACA is where counseling professionals turn to strong and credible content and support. The American Counseling Association is a non-profit, professional, and educational organization dedicated to the growth and improvement of the counseling profession. Founded in 1952, the ACA is the largest association in the world that exclusively represents professional counselors in a variety of practice settings. The mission of the American Counseling Association is to improve the quality of life in the community by promoting the development of professional counselors, advancing the counseling profession, and using counseling professions and practices to promote respect for human dignity and diversity. Four independent associations held a joint convention in Los Angeles, CA in 1952: the National Vocational Guidance Association (NVGA), the National Association of Guidance and Counselor Trainers (NAGCT), the Student Personnel Association for Teacher Education (SPATE), and the American College Personnel Association, in hopes of providing a greater professional voice. They founded the American Personnel and Guidance Association (APGA), then changed the name in 1983 to the American Association of Counseling and Development. On July 1, 1992, the association changed its name to the American Counseling Association (ACA) to reflect the shared bond among association members and to strengthen the unity of their goals. Headquartered in Alexandria, VA, just outside Washington, D.C., the American Counseling Association promotes public trust and trust in the counseling profession so that professionals can better assist their clients and students in facing the challenges presented The American Counseling Association services professional counselors in the U.S. and in 50 others including Europe, Latin America, the Philippines, and the Virgin Islands. In addition, the American Counseling Association is associated with a comprehensive network of 19 divisions and 56 branches. The American Counseling Association also collaborates with several corporate and related organizations to improve member services. There are 20 charter divisions within the American Counseling Association. These divisions provide leadership, resources, and information unique to specific areas and/or counseling principles. The ACA has four territories, serving members in the region. Lastly, the ACA has 56 leased branches in the U.S., Europe and Latin America. In the American Counseling Association there are 20 divisions. These divisions enhance professional identity and are organized around specific areas of interest and practice. These divisions provide professional strength and meet the diverse needs of the counseling community. The Association for Adult Development and Aging (AADA) Chartered in 1986, AADA served as a focal point for information sharing, professional development, and advocacy related to adult development and aging issues; counseling issues across all ages. Association for Assessment and Research in Counseling (AARC) Initially the Association for Measurement and Evaluation in Guidance, AARC was hired in 1965. The purpose of the AARC is to promote the effective use of assessment in the counseling profession. The Association for Child and Adolescent Counseling (ACAC) aims to focus on the training needs of counselors working with children and adolescents, while providing professional support to these counselors, whether school counselors, play therapists, or counselor educators. Association for Creativity in Counseling (ACC) The Association for Creativity in Counseling (ACC) is a forum for counsellors, counselor educators, creative arts therapists and counselors in training to explore unique and diverse counselling approaches. The ACC's goal is to promote greater awareness, advocacy and understanding of diverse and creative approaches to counseling. The American College Counseling Association (ACCA) ACCA is one of the newest divisions of the American Counseling Association. Hired in 1991, ACCA's focus was on fostering student development at community colleges, universities and colleges. The Association for Counselor Education and Supervision (ACES) Was originally the National Association of Guidance Coaches and Counselors, ACES was the founding association of the ACA in 1952. ACES emphasizes the need for quality education and counselor supervision for all work arrangements. The Association for Humanistic Counseling (AHC) AHC, formerly C-AHEAD, the founding association of the ACA in 1952, provides information exchange forums on practice and promote changes that reflect the growth of the body's knowledge of humanistic principles applied to human development and potential. Association for Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Issues in Counseling (ALGBTIC) Educates counselors for the unique needs of client identity development; and a counseling environment that is not threatening by aiding the reduction of stereotypical thinking and homophobia. Association for Multicultural Counseling and Development (AMCD) Originally a Non-White Concern Association in Personnel and Guidance, the AMCD was hired in 1972. The AMCD seeks to increase empathy and understanding of culture, ethnicity and race by programs to advance and sustain personal growth. The American Mental Health Counselors Association (AMHCA) Chartered in 1978, AMHCA represented mental health counselors, who advocated client access to quality services in the healthcare industry. Arca's American Rehabilitation Counseling Association (ARCA) is an organization of rehabilitation counseling practitioners, educators, and students concerned with improving the development of people with disabilities throughout their lifetime and in promoting excellence in the professional counseling, research, consulting, and professional development professions. The American School Counselor Association (ASCA) Chartered in 1953, ASCA promoted school counseling professionals and interest in activities that influenced students' personal development, education, and careers. ASCA members also work with parents, educators, and community members to provide a positive learning environment. Association for Spiritual, Ethical, and Religious Values in Counseling (ASERVIC) Originally a National Catholic Guidance Conference, ASERVIC was hired in 1974. ASERVIC is devoted to professionals who believe that spiritual, ethical, religious, and other humanitarian values are essential to the person's full development and counseling discipline. The Association for Specialists in Group Work (ASGW) Chartered in 1973, ASGW provided professional leadership in the field of group work, set standards for professional training, and supported the research and dissemination of knowledge. Csj Counselors for Social Justice (CSJ) are community counselors, educator counselors, graduate students, and school and community leaders seeking equality and an end to oppression and injustice affecting clients, students, counselors, families, communities, schools, workplaces, governments, and other social and institutional systems. International Association of Addictions and Offender Counselors (IAAOC) Originally the Association of Public Offender Counselors, the IAAOC was hired in 1972. IAAOC members advocate the development of effective counseling and rehabilitation programs for people with substances, other addictions, and adults and/or public violators. International Association of Marriage and Family Counselors (IAMFC) Chartered in 1989, IAMFC members helped develop a healthy family system through prevention, education and therapy. The Military and Government Counseling Association (MGCA) was formerly aceg initially the Association of Educators and Military Counselors. MGCA was hired in 1984. MGCA is dedicated to counseling clients and their families in local, state, and federal governments or in military-related agencies. (Website may not be available at this time) National Career Development Association (NCDA) Originally the National Vocational Guidance Association, NCDA was one of the founding associations of the ACA in 1952. NCDA provides professional development, connections, publications, standards, and advocacy to career development professionals who inspire and empower individuals to achieve their career and life goals. Neca's National Employment Counseling Association (NECA) was originally the National Association of Employment Counselors and was hired in 1966. NECA's commitment is to offer professional leadership to people who counsel in job arrangements and/or career development. School counseling programs should be an integral part of a student's daily educational environment, and school counselors should be partners in student achievement. The question has been asked, What does the school counselor do? The more important question is, How do students differ as a result of what school counselors do? To help answer this question, the American School Counselor Association (ASCA) created the ASCA National Model®, which is the framework for a comprehensive, data-driven school counseling program. Explore this section of the website to learn more about the ASCA National Model, its components, and how developing school counseling programs based on this framework can improve student achievement. Five Bits of Advice for implementation of the ASCA National Model Remember, the goal of the ASCA National Model is to do more school counseling. Keep it simple. The ASCA National Model is even more important when you have a large case load. The ASCA National Model gives you the tools you need to remove items from your plate. Take advantage of the experts in your district. ASCA National Model Executive Summary Competency Of ASCA School Counselors The Role of ASCA Counselors Standards for Students Texas School Counselors Association Brief History Association of Texas School Counselors In 1966, the Texas School Counselors Association was hired as one of two divisions of what at the time was known as the Texas Personnel and Guidance Association. Louise Dooley served as the first president. Since Texas has passed the standard for school counselor certification in 1955, there is a real need for such associations. TSCA has worked closely with its parent organization, the Texas Counseling Association, and through collaborative efforts, both organizations have helped pass significant bills through the Texas Legislature, starting with the Basic Counseling Act of 1990. The following year the Texas Evaluation Model for School Counselors was developed, and in 1999 updated school counselor certification standards were identified. Legal Counselor Program & School Counseling (TEC, Ch 33 A) was authorized in 2001. Recently, the TCA and TSCA collaborated to help include school counselors in the 65% rule, thereby strengthening school counseling programs in the state. As the largest division of the TCA, the Texas School Counselors Association provides many services to members. Every November at the TCA Conference, TSCA holds annual association meetings and lunches. All of our member services help provide professional leadership and energy to TCA, as every member we recruit must also join our parent organization. Several important pieces of legislation have been passed through the joint efforts of the TCA and TSCA, including the adoption of the Texas Comprehensive Development Guidance Program by the Texas Education Association. TSCA hosts its joint conference in the spring for secondary and primary counselors. The quality of conferences is at a consistently high level, and counselors can complete most if not all of their annual requirements for professional development through attendance. The cost of a conference is about 1/3 of the attendance fee at the national conference. The quarterly newsletter, The Voice of the School Counselor, offers substantive resources and information for school counselors at all levels including up-to-date and useful information related to Standards of Practice for school counselors at all levels. The TSCA website provides additional resources, including Power Point presentations and handouts from speaker presentations. Every year, TSCA provides professional recognition to all levels of counselors, their supervisors, and their supporters. Our Human Rights Arts Contest is open to students at all levels; recipient of monetary rewards. TSCA also provides many scholarships to high school students, as well as postgraduate work towards their studies and school counseling. As the largest division and one of the oldest divisions of the Texas Counseling Association, TSCA serves more than 2,000 memberships. In addition, TSCA provides professional development and support to a larger group of professionals through its annual conference. In terms of advocacy and dissemination of information to members, TSCA has been exemplary as a division of the Texas Counseling Association. The Texas TCA Counseling association TCA's roots trace back to 1935-1945 when interested counselors would meet during the Texas State Teachers Association's Annual Convention. On November 29, 1947, a group of counselors convened for the first time as a Guidance Section at the annual TSTA Convention. This meeting mainly deals with the establishment of guidance programs in public schools. In 1948, a decision was made to develop a counseling association. In 1950, the constitution of the Texas Guidance Association (TGA) was completed and an organization was born. The following year, the Dean of the Women and Mental Hygiene Group joined the association. In 1954 the association began its efforts to become a state branch of the American Personnel and Guidance Association (APGA). On April 9, 1963, the TGA received the APGA state charter recognizing it as the Texas Personnel and Guidance Association (TPGA). In 1992, Texas joined the leadership of a national association and was renamed the Texas Counseling Association (TCA). www.txca.org/history HPSO Responsibility Insurance (opportunity to purchase) TCA members have the opportunity to purchase liability insurance through the Healthcare Providers Service Organization (HPSO). TCA is proud to support HPSO and has chosen it as the association's professional liability insurance administrator due to HPSO's benefits, features, affordable rates, and commitment to superior services. TCA Master's level student members can purchase HPSO liability insurance for as much as $18. TCA State and Federal Advocacy works diligently to ensure that all issues of professional counseling are a priority for legislators in Texas and Washington DC. The TCA speaks on behalf of and with our members as the governing body of the counseling profession considering laws and policy changes that impact your work. The TCA organizes three Legislative Advocacy Days at the State Capitol during each Texas Legislative Session and also sends a coalition of TCA leaders to Capitol Hill each July. In addition, the TCA contracted the services of two independent lobbyists to more effectively draft legislation and influence public policy decisions. Liaisons for State Licensure Boards TCA appointed a number of volunteers to the state licensing board in Texas. This liaison supports your profession by monitoring report the work being done by the board includes: the State Board of Professional Counselor Examiners, the State Board of Examiners for Marriage and Family Therapists, the State Board for Educator Certification, and the Texas Board of Education. The TCA works closely with our liaisons to ensure that proposed rule changes and agency announcements are vetted by the association, and that input from TCA membership is requested and submitted where appropriate. TCA's Public Service Announcements have resulted in a series of TV and radio Public Service Announcements (PSA) focusing on topics such as drug abuse, suicide, domestic violence, mental health issues, developmental disabilities, military deployment, and more. Viewers and listeners are encouraged to seek counseling services and are directed to the TCA website where they can access the TCA Referral Bank as well as additional resources to support their emotional health. Referral Bank Referral TCA makes it easy for clients to find you. Our electronic database can be searched by city, zip code, and language used, as well as over 70+ practical specialties. TCA actively encourages traffic to referral banks through a series of TV and radio public service announcements. All TCA members are registered with the Referral Bank using professional contacts and practice-specific information provided on their membership profiles. Members who want to be excluded from the database may simply opt out of this feature. Speakers Bureau The TCA Speakers Bureau helps connect individuals, associations, and businesses looking for counseling professionals for engagements or subsequent speaking events. TCA members must opt-in to have their professional contact and presentation information listed in the Speaker's Bureau. In addition, TCA members presenting workshops or programs at TCA conferences will automatically add that session information to their profiles in an electronic database. TCA Membership Division members can connect and network with colleagues from similar practice settings by joining one or more of the 12 TCA Divisions. Divisions often focus their efforts on targeted advocacy and professional development opportunities. Cheap and professional division membership dues can choose from the following areas of practice: Adult Development and Aging; Assessment in Counseling and Education; Career Development; College Counseling; Extension of Education and Supervision; Counselor for Social Justice; Humanistic Education and Development; Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Issues in Counseling; Marriage and Family Counseling; Mental Health Counseling; Multicultural Counseling and Development; and School Counseling. Chapter Membership Counseling Professionals who want to stay connected with colleagues in their geographic area are encouraged join one of TCA's 32 Border chapters are established along county lines and segmented into five larger areas across the state. Many Chapters host workshops and annual meetings to help counselors in their area get professional development credits close to home. TCA Service Members of the National Committee who wish to directly impact both the work of the association and the counseling profession are encouraged to apply for services to the Committee. TCA committee members are appointed annually, and members can serve on the same committee for up to three consecutive years. The committee's work focuses on issues including public policy, research and ethics as well as association awards, grants, by-laws and membership. TCA Members of the Professional Growth Conference receive a discounted enrollment rate for our largest annual conference, the TCA Professional Growth Conference, held annually in November. The full four-day event featured 20+ program topics, 160+ program sessions (including pre- and post-conference workshops), and easily attracted more than 2,000 attendees. The program is intended for licensed professional counselors, marriage and family therapists, professional school and college counselors, guidance directors, counselor educators, graduate counseling students, principal counselors and other mental health professionals. Organized by TCA, all conference programs are eligible for LPC, NBCC, SBEC, LCDC, LMFT, SW, and Psychologist education credits. The annual College Counselors Conference of School Counselors is held every February.
