AACSB accreditation ensures quality and promotes excellence and continuous improvement in undergraduate and master's education around the world. AACSB International is an association of educational institutions, enterprises and other organizations involved in the development of higher education in the education of managers. It is also the first accreditation agency for collegiate business schools and accounting programs around the world. History Located at the University of Minnesota on the west bank of the Mississippi River in Minneapolis, and part of one of the country's leading public grant research universities, the Carlson School of Management has a rich history of preparing and educating the world's current and future business leaders. Since its inception in 1919 as the University of Minnesota School of Business, the school has grown, renamed and moved locations, maintaining a continued commitment to excellence. This evolution was helped by the generosity of many business partners, in particular Curt Carlson and Herbert M. Hanson, Jr. In 1986, Curt Carlson (founder of Carlson Companies and namesake of Carlson School) made a $25 million gift to the University of Minnesota, which at the time was the largest single gift ever given to a public university. In his honor, the School of Management was renamed the Curtis L. Carlson School of Management. His gift established several gifted chairs and marked the beginning of carlson school's entry into the upper echelon of business schools. In 1993, Carlson became the main gift for the Carlson School building, evoking gifts from individuals, corporations and foundations, as well as a legislative commitment. The building was dedicated in 1998. In 2007, Carlson School became one of the first business schools in the country to require undergraduate students to participate in a global learning experience. In 2008, Herbert M. Hanson, Jr., a benefactor and graduate of the University of Minnesota, supported the construction of Hanson Hall, effectively consolidating classes, services and programs in one place.
