CastleMiner Z is a 2011 video game released on Xbox Live Indie Games on November 9, 2011 and is a seguel to CastleMiner. Gameplay in CastleMiner Z, players must get their own resources instead of starting with them. Players can also craft weapons such as a shotgun or assault rifle. Another change from the original game is the addition of enemies, including zombies, dragons and demons. Online modes can accommodate cooperative games from 2 to 8 players. CastleMiner Z Awards includes Prizes that are awarded for doing various things like playing online for a certain number of hours, traveling more items and killing more zombies. CastleMiner Warfare CastleMiner Warfare is a 2013 video game released for digital download on Windows PC. This is the second installment of CastleMiner, with a game inspired by the Call of Duty series. Reception In September 2011 compared video of the first three Minecraft-inspired titles released at xbox live indie games (including CastleMiner, and Total Miner), Mike B. of the Big Fat-focused video game Fony Report said CastleMiner was his least – the favorite of all three titles, saying that the game lacked brightness and didn't seem complete enough to be released. However, he liked that the game blog ExtraGuy reviewed both CastleMiner games; In his September 2011 review of the original CastleMiner,[3] he gave the game a lower than average D rating. He criticized CastleMiner for having choppy graphics over long distances, without water plus a block of cloudy water that does not act like real water (i.e. not being able to sink and swim), and for having blocks with unique geometry where it states that the block of fences in the game was simply a fence texture applied to all faces of a regular block, including the top that makes the fences in the game look terrible. He says that towards the end of his review, in his experience, every Minecraft clone on the Xbox 360 is a deliberate income, but at least many of them know that fun equals cash. CastleMiner ignores this assumption and goes to the 'Minecraft clone equals cash'. [3] Bill was more positive with CastleMiner Z in his review of the game for adding zombie survival to Minecraft – like games, although he wrote that he did not parange outstanding performance or aesthetics and mentioned that out of game mode could easily be added to the original CastleMiner as downloadable content. He gave the game a higher-than-average C+. [4] Despite these reviews and the possible release of Minecraft: Xbox 360 Edition, CastleMiner has been commercially successful on Xbox Live Indie Games. On August 15, 2012, developer DigitalDNA Games announced that CastleMiner Z held the record as the best selling Xbox Live Indie game with over 900,000 units. It achieved this goal in just nine months, making it India's best-selling Xbox Live game, surpassing sales of Minecraft-inspired XBLIG games like Total Miner and FortressCraft. On September 17, 2012, DigitalDNA Games announced that CastleMiner Z had become the first standalone Xbox Live game to surpass one million sales on the platform, reaching a record in ten months. On April 1, 2013, the developer announced that the original CastleMiner had also sold a million games. I loved playing this game at 360 and would love to experience it again. Given that as one of india's best games I think it should be backwards compatible. Page 2 4 comments A million copies is a magical character. You can run the game on the digital platform on the service and sell 999,990, all right, but until you get to a million, you're nobody. It's a number that makes you send press releases right and wrong. it's a number that makes you jump with joy (ten copies less is not the same), it's a number that can attract everyone's attention. Example: CastleMiner Z. It is one of many independent games that we can find in the XBLIG catalog, but it is the first one that exceeds the number of one million copies sold. DigitalDNA Games, the development team, says its game has been the best selling game of the day on XBLIG since it was released just over ten months ago. Quite a record. 'CastleMiner', the title (original, I mean) that last month exceeded the number of 900,000 copies sold (see? Okay, but wherever you put a million copies, you take the rest off. According to the developers, it is a voxel/sandbox zombie survival game where the player can build and create mines in more than an enemy world. The key is to collect as many items as we can to survive. By the way, DigitalDNA Games gets the top three best selling games a day on XBLIG with 'CastleMiner Z', 'CastleMiner' and 'Avatar Laser Wars 2'. Congratulations. Gift video? There goes the trailer: YouTube video PD: 'CastleMiner Z' looks like 'MineCraft', yes. No one's hiding it. What's more, I think it is proudly displayed. PD2: The game is awarded 80 Microsoft Points. It's not bad. It's not bad.
