Pivans take the children to their appropriate places as the next kings and queen of Narnia (all four rulers together), Tomanos Narnia as the court's adviser. And Little Lucy's best friend. He makes many trips with the Kings and the Queen His time in Narnia, serving them for the length of the golden age. For many years in their power, when things are quiet and their people are happy and live in peace, the ponsi children listen to the white deer and it is said that the deer-bearer who will be given three wishes. Tomanos wants his lassy a safe hunt and four away from going and they are leading on a my back, but eventually these deer are the only ones. Thinking they are on his way, the king and queen track him on foot and lead themselves back through their wardrobe unintentionally that first brought them into the Narnia. They emerged in the room in their home, the same age they left first and discovered that more than an hour or two have passed (although they lived in Narnia for over a decade). Unfortunately, no one can enter Narnia twice in the same way and they need to bid farewell to the land they have come to love. Narnia's golden age ends and the dark ages begin, and Tomanos will not see his dear friend Umar until they both arrive in the country of Aslan (i.e.: they both died and met again in death. I cry!?! When Lucy and Edmund Hillary return to Narnia with their cousin Eustace (novel/film Prince in the Sea), Tomanos has already approved himself over the land of Aslan. ;____; As far as the game history goes, he can be rather bombastic, and his numerous accidents and sturds are to shame him--at worst, he is short for a stamrang dress. He is a creature of infinite forgiveness, often his own ability to indristamatang. Either party should keep their initial meeting alive with him, however, a charming individual will find Tomanos, who is easily relative to win the friendship and trust of those around him. He is very polite and reasonable, and you will rarely get along with him, even when he ventures out to meet with his more pleasant brothers on the dance lawn. After 100 years of spending the winter alone, he is much more comfortable resigning, although he is not particularly hindered. Although initially he was very mature, the important meeting by The Lampost and his consequent friendship with young Lucy Pivansi has inspired Tomanos in a wonderful way even though he didn't know. He will fight for the young queen with a hesitation and he will do so until his last breath breathes. About the youngest of the ponsi children, Tomanos has established strong and most reliable friendships. Both serve as consultants and mentors. Tomanos finds himself in a power that never expects. He is very much sorry for his early deception in the service of the white witch and always has the unsung feeling that he is wronged by his young friend, no matter the amount of money or time dedicated Good fight. Tomanos maintains the terrible fear of the rods since then which he was transformed into a stone by the jadice, the white witch. He said, however, and did, go to war against the same woman in an attempt to make way for a safe and just Narnia under the rule of Aslan. They get a quiet evening at home, located in a luxurious chair with fire roaring in their fireplace. A book preferred to call off the sword and a soft laugh war. He is above all , he is a creature who was half his father . Although he has already proved on several occasions. He loves Lucy Pivansi as a stoic soulmate, seeing all her hopes and desires not just in Narnia, but in her world of Spear O'Om. He remembers his considerable disappearance many years ago when he and his older siblings stopped to chase the white deer in the forest, completely eliminated from the land of Narnia. The desert, but confident Aslan, he hopes for his return, someday. The appearance is well modified, tomanos and thus not human. He has a man and a goat's torso of the lower half; Howos, Tail and all. His head is topped with a pair of horn and his ears are like goats. Tomanos B: James McEvey's skills, skills and talent sit in a determined fighter, Tomnos put it in his hand so the body with a sword is worth it, although not a truly trained fighter. He is able to physically defend himself and scare them around them from using their environment for the best benefit. He is a well-practiced and capable player of his Narenian Red Pipe and he can use a natural way to put someone to sleep until someone is asleep. (Pipe is known for promoting mixed emotions on the audience: crying, dancing, and wanting to sleep.. sleep always happens, but may be along with other stresses) he has a great sense of balance, which has helped both fight and escape from war.
