All ansehen I have not yet been happy with visiting Charlie Brown's Steakhouse to the point where I have given up. It was only because that I had a gift card to this place on my last visit that I even ventured to walk to the place. Otherwise, I would never have done it of my own free will. For a place that is supposed to be a steakhouse, it definitely feels like a fancy dinner. It feels like the whole place is confused because I don't know exactly what the décor should represent. To me, it doesn't feel at all inviting or comfortable. The service has always been a problem when I come here and it was no different again. Trying to flag down a waiter is almost impossible, but they always seem to appear when you least want to. It feels like they are very uninterested in the customers they serve. I've had better reactions from the busboys who work there. And the food is definitely not something to get excited about. I ordered a steak and asked for medium rare. What did I end up getting? Good job. I could barely cut it. My wife ordered a shrimp dish and barely received any shrimp. When we inquired about the answer was : This is how it is done. Really!! The best part is paying the bill and not even getting my change back. How do they get away with that? It took me 20 minutes to flag down my server which mysteriously disappeared left for the day. I didn't like Charlie Brown's Steakhouse on my first visit but gave it another chance. Chance. A few times I can see that nothing will ever change. If I want to waste my money, I'd be more lucky to give it to a beggar instead. Unfortunately this restaurant is not on the OpenTable reservation network. American, chicken, coffee and tea, Grill, Burgers, Ribs, Salads, Sandwiches, Seafood, Steak, Wings I probably haven't been to this restaurant in 20 years and my heart sunk when I got the location for a family party. I still felt that way when we walked to the uninspired reception and saw the dark brown, heavy... furniture and flat screen TVs on either side of the room we were in. I had no real hope of a great dinner or a great time. I have to say, I was pleasantly surprised. Our waiter, Linda, bravely took care of our table for ten single-handedly and with humor. Orders ranged from nachos to steak, with quite a few plates of pork ribs. The salad bar was included, but I must have either left that or only ordered half a rack of ribs because although I didn't eat bread or potato, I was absolutely stuffed and couldn't even manage a cup of coffee afterwards. Others seemed to enjoy the cheesecake and brownie sundae. A bottle of Pinot noir, good value for half the price on Tuesday, was drinkable, but a little thin for my taste. What can I say to summarize? The good is good quality, tasty and more than plentiful and all the staff is charming and friendly. There is plenty of parking. Unfortunately, only parts of the restaurant are wheelchair accessible, which means that a customer in a wheelchair cannot personally visit the salad bar. This place would have received an excellent appreciation from me as it was redecorated with fresher, more attractive décor and didn't remind me of sticky table pubs I hung out in back in the 80s.
