Ptsd quotes famous

Keep up with the latest daily buzz with the BuzzFeed Daily newsletter! Education is the foundation of social and economic development. Throughout history, philosophers such as Aristotle and Plato have recognized the importance of education. Use these famous training clips to inspire others to follow the path of knowledge. Only through education can we hope to eradicate social evils. Some of the biggest thinkers believe that access to formal education is the key to equality and social justice. Many of these thinkers, including Horace Mann and Thomas Jefferson, founded schools and universities to provide the kind of education they embraced. Here are some of their thoughts on formal education. Horace Mann: Education, then, in addition to all other devices of human origin, is the great equalizer of men's conditions, the balance-wheel of social machinery. Aristotle: The roots of education are bitter, but the fruit is sweet. Thomas Jefferson: Intolerance is the disease of ignorance, of morbid minds, enthusiasm of the free and intense. Education and free debate are the antidotes of both. Benjamin Franklin: Genius without education is like silver in mine. Helen Keller: The highest result of education is tolerance. Victor Hugo: He who opens a school door closes a prison. Malala Yousafzai: A child, a teacher, a book, a pen can change the world. Nelson Mandela: Education is the most powerful weapon you can use to change the world. Many great thinkers believe that formal learning in a school environment is less valuable than experience and informal learning. Some even believe that formal education can slow down or distort the process of discovery and learning. Here are some of their thoughts. Jim Rohn: Formal training will make you a living; Self-education will make you a fortune. Albert Einstein: Education is all that remains after someone has forgotten everything they learned at school. Oscar Wilde: Education is an admirable thing, but it's good to remember from time to time that anything worth knowing can be learned. Galileo Galileo: You cannot teach a man anything. You can only help him find it in him. Teaching has always been one of the most important professions. Over time, the real daily experience of teaching and learning has changed. The main purpose and effect, however, remain the same. C. S. Lewis: The task of the modern teacher is not to jungles, but water deserts. Henry Brooks Adams: A teacher affects eternity. He can never tell where his influence stops. Ralph Waldo Emerson: The secret to education lies in the respect of the student. William Arthur Ward: The mediocre teacher says. The good teacher explains. The senior teacher shows. The great teacher inspires. Nikos Kazantzakis: The real teachers are the ones who on which they invite their pupils to pass; then, having facilitated their crossing, they gladly collapse, encouraging them to create their own. Aristotle: Those who know, do. Those who understand teach. Henry Brooks Adams: Teachers influence eternity. no one can say where their influence stops. It's amazing how some people know when and how to be funny. Maybe it's their bubbly spirit, casual behavior, or caustic comments that made them famously funny. Or maybe, it's the topics they chose to comment on. If you can find something important to say about basic human emotions and foibles-vanity, self-importance, love, attraction, commercialization, and even lust-in a biting but funny way, your words are likely to provoke feelings in your listeners or readers and remember. So it is with quotes from famous people on this list. The excerpts represented below are an eclectic mix of comedians, writers, playwrights, and even a well-known existential philosopher.
