Daily freeman journal phone number

Reader David writes with this excellent advice for phone anonymity: I needed to call someone in my cell but didn't want ts to get my caller ID number. I know how to use *67 at home when I want to do this, but cell marking is different – you don't get that double sphere tone to let you know that you are now restricting your number. With your cell, just start the number you're calling with the *67, as if the phone number starts with those three digits. The important thing to remember is that you will need to put the 1 before the area code, since the cells normally do not need the 1. For example, enter * 6719175551212 before pressing the talk button will drive the recipients' caller ID to read restricted. On your phone, your caller ID appears as a private call using this method. It seems like a clever way to keep your number to yourself when you want to avoid publicize the world. Of course, this is probably also the biggest weapon penny stalkers. Please use only forever.
