Moving to a new area can be taxing for a number of reasons, but for me, the boss among them is doing field work to find the best utility restaurants. You have to have a good Chinese restaurant to trust, and you have to have a pizzeria. Charlie wasn't my first choice when I was taking the first tentative steps in Toms River; Frankly, that was the name. I want my pizza made by Carlo or Pietro, preferably in a scenario with his last name, or disclosing the number of brothers involved in the company. When I think about pizza, I don't think about Charlie. In fact, for me to associate a name less with pizza, it would have to be something like Seamus O'Leary or Tamazaki Hiro. So it was the last place I tried, and as they say, it's always the last place you look. Charlie makes a good, solid, simple pie, one where neither the sauce nor the cheese overload the other. They also have an excellent variety of special pies as well as the usual selection of toppings. It's not really the pizza I like so much about Charlie, though, but everything else. They have great submarines, cold or hot, on wide bread and fresh (good bread is the cornerstone of any submarine). One caveat, though: if you like mayonaisse on your submarine, be sure to ask for extra... to look at your standard, restrained application of it, you'd think it was made of truffles and platinum. They also have a good selection of standard starters, almost all of which I've tried and liked (stay away from The Marsala Chicken, however – the sauce is watery and relatively tasteless when compared to even a mediocre marsala dish). The calzones are excellent, although the only time I tried your stromboli, the mass in the middle was, say, rare. I really like the fried ravioli served with the marinara next door, accompanying the Rollatini Eggplant. They also make a decent cheesesteak, though far from the best I've ever had; unfortunately i still have to identify a large cheesesteak in this area after ten search. For me, it's not that the food at Charlie's is excellent, because it's not, but but it's always good, that almost everything on the menu is good, and it's always the same. You know with absolute certainty, every time you ask, that you're going to get exactly the same thing you liked the last time you asked for it, and there's value in that. Especially for someone like me who ends up asking for four nights out of seven. So give them a chance - I don't think you'll be disappointed. It's a place where you can come in and sit and talk sports with the locals and feel that you're insider in all the action... in baseball, basketball or anything else, bartender Tom treats everyone like they're local and has many stories about retired athletes and some of their greatest exploits. Again, as the television show of the past Cheers. This is the real place. There are many beverage options, from cold beer, alcoholic beverages to non-alcoholic beverages. The food is great from fresh pizza, stromboli, calzones to pasta, and more. On this visit I ordered the small Stromboli, which is a regular size for the average person and was excellent! Fresh, full of flavor, with side of maranara sauce. Along with a cold beer, it was a perfect match! Simply put, this is a neighborhood tavern where anyone would feel welcome and leave feeling like they were part of it all. But we were staying at a local hotel, and we ordered Charlie's delivery, since we didn't feel like going out to find food. They said it could take 45 minutes, but it was a lot less than that. We ordered a little luxury with extra cheese... and 4 other ingredients. Arrived fresh and warm - good crust, good sauce, vegetables were fresh, more than enough cheese, and more than we could both eat. I could have had more pepperoni, but that's normal take pizza. There were a lot of other tasty things on the menu that would be worth trying if Here. More here. More
