Two highly anticipated venues, Roxian and Black Forge Coffee, will both open in the coming weeks, giving many people plenty of reasons to control the neighborhood. The Roxian, an old Vaudeville theater, is almost ready to open its doors for their first show and Grand Opening on May 10 with British funk band The New Mastersounds John Pergal, COO and Partner of Roxian Live, decided to invest in the old theater when approached by Tairs Vreck of mckees rocks CDC. He's a fan of the Thunderbird Cafe, my other venue. Once I first saw the Theater, I knew it had great potential to become an incredible live music venue. He also saw an opportunity to have a positive impact on the community. This was also an opportunity to help transform the Lower Chartiers business district, similar to what the Thunderbird Cafe did in Lawrenceville. Pergal promises world-class sound and lighting and broad lines of view, to improve people's experiences. There will also be 20 beers on tap, with a focus on local craft breweries. Such local attention will continue even when it comes to booking acts. Whenever possible, we will make local artists as for itinerant artists at national level. We will also host special events and local showcases that will include our favorite Pittsburgh Black Forge Coffee will also officially open their new McRock Rocks venue soon, although a date has not yet been set. After battling noise problems with live music in their Allentown location, metal-loving coffee heads decided to find a new location, settling in a former Chartiers Trust Bank building. They plan to hit the running ground, so be sure to check their website for upcoming shows and events.
