(Ride it, ride it) comes touching my soul... (Ride it, ride it) let me feel you... Everything was right until the phone starts ringing She takes it to a corner that's when I start to wonder I can hear her shouting, banging lists against the door Yelling It's over, I can't take it anymore So I go away and act all nonchalant and chill I'm not tryna get caught in a mess for real But she came around and backed me up against the wall She said she said That I know you heard, but I'll make you forget it all The first time english singer Jay Sean released Ride It, a fluttering single about seduction on the dance floor, the track became a hit pretty much everywhere. It was huge for me, Sean recalls. I had a global fanbase already on top of the songs I did with Virgin Records. Ride It got played around the world [in 2008]. But one country remained untouched. The only place it didn't take off was America because no one really knew me there at all, the singer says. Now Ride It is getting a second chance Stateside: A house remix of Regard - pace pushed higher, vocals pitched lower but otherwise true to the original - topped spotify's viral chart in the US last week. When a hit is a hit, you can't keep it down, Sean says happily. It wanted to be a hit in the first place. Second life of Ride It is due in part to its popularity on video app TikTok: Throughout the summer, users have been soundtracking clips with Regard's remix, which has been put into more than two million videos. This is hardly the first old song to receive an unexpected boost from TikTok users ravenously for soundtrack material. We have songs in our catalogue that show up in the Top Ten, Top 20 at TikTok for no other reason than people using it. Jeff Vaughn, VP of A&R at Artist Partner Group, told Rolling Stone earlier this summer, citing Kylie's Hey Julie and Absolut's Dissolve as examples. It makes us go back and work some of these items, put more resources behind them. Sean had no idea Ride It was ready for this kind of resurgence. But two months ago he was warned by a 14-year-old cousin: Oh my God, you're over TikTok. I know the app, but I'm like, why am I going viral? Sean recalls. It turns out the remix is nice. Perhaps the singer should have guessed that Ride It would come back in style: It had already proven its viral potential over a decade ago. In 2008, YouTube was a bit of a new thing, just in the way that apps like TikTok are popping now, Sean explains. At the time we didn't really know how songs could be leaked. Every singer was hacked, and a demo version of 'Ride It' leaked on YouTube - we don't know how. It could have been disastrous: At the time, record did not know how to respond to leaks. But instead, Sean's fans reacted enthusiastically to the demo, and the singer saw his views climb fast. As a result, he says, we decided to shoot a music video for ['Ride It'] and turn it into a single. This turned out to be a savvy move: Ride It reached number 11 in the UK Beyond chart position, the success of the track meant a shift in my career from the old Jay Sean to the new Jay Sean, the singer adds. There was a time when I had spiky hair and I was doing Indian-influenced R&B fusion songs. But on this one, I went all the way R&B. Sean subsequently connected with Cash Money Records and went on to hit Number One in the US with Lil Wayne's collaboration Down. Now that a new generation of listeners is falling for Regard's version of Ride It, Sean's voice is back on the ether. It plays on the radio in England a lot, Sean says. (It also debuted on the UK singles chart this week at Number 69.) My friends at home go, 'Yo, man, I hope you get paid for this! Sean adds. I'm like, yes - I wrote the damn thing. Let me feel you It's been about a month and twenty days... And we go around and round play silly games ... Now you're saying slow down, not right now... So you wink at me and walk away. Let it be, let it be, let it be known... Hang on, don't go... Touching and teasing me, telling me no... But this time I need to feel... (Ride it) we're all alone ... (Ride it) just lose control... (Ride it, ride it) comes touching my soul... (Ride it, ride it) let me feel you... (Ride it) turn the lights down low... (Ride it) from head to toe ... (Ride it, ride it) comes touching my soul... (Ride it, ride it) let me feel you... MoVida was the club on Saturday ... You act like a diva saying you don't want to pay... It must be your feisty style... Raised eyebrows...
